The photograph of a man found in her trunk which was discovered in the checking room at the North Station today gave the police renewed hope of solving the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of Ada Taylor, the nurse maid whose body was found on the beach at Winthrop.

The finding of the photograph has established the fact that Miss Taylor had at least one male acquaintance, who to her was more than a mere friend. This is regarded as one of the most important clews unearthed by the inquiry into the baffling tragedy of the sea.

The police are inclined to the belief the man in the photograph may be is being sought. Copies of the possibly have been her husband, also photograph will be sent all over New England and to the Taylor woman's home at Tidnish, N. S., in the hope somebody may recognize the man and reveal his identity and possible relation to the dead woman.

If this man is found he will be asked to account for his movements on the Sunday night Miss Taylor disappeared from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ceder in Shirley street, Winthrop, and the intervening time until the body of the victim was found on the beach at the head of Locust street, Winthrop.

HINT OF DISGUISES.

In this manner the police hope to learn the reason for Miss Taylor's sudden departure, her whereabouts during the next three days and what took place on the beach at Winthrop previous to the death of the woman last Wednesday night. They also hope to learn what has become of the suit case which Miss Taylor took with her when she left her place of employment.

The suit case is still regarded as a prime factor in the case and its disposition and present location is handicapping the police investigation. In the suit case are believed to be several letters and photographs which are expected to throw considerable light on the past life of the woman, which neither the police or her relatives have been able to penetrate.

The secrecy with which Miss Taylor apparently clothed her every movement since she left her home in Nova Scotia, has greatly increased the difficulty of getting at a solution of the manner in which she met her death.

The number of wigs found in Miss Taylor's trunk is another feature of the case which is occupying the attention of the detectives working on the case today. They have been unable to find a plausible explanation as to what a woman with such a luxuriant growth of hair as Miss Taylor had, wanted with so many wigs.

All of the wigs were of dark hue and the theory that Miss Taylor adopted various disguises as she shifted her employment from one place to another is gaining credence. Much of the secrecy of her past life and the difficulty in dogging her footsteps, has been attributed to this reason.

Practically the only information obtained by the police regarding Miss Taylor's earlier life that would aid them in the search for her slayer is that she was known in several places as "Mrs." Taylor. This has added strength to the belief she had been secretly married, although this report has not been confirmed.

"Vopper" Lawrence May Now Escape Death Sentence

The suicide of Lawrence "Diamond Chip" Robinson leaves none to dispute the assertion of Walter "Vopper" Lawrence, now a prisoner at Grand Rapids, Mich., that it was Robinson and not "Vopper" who accomplished the triple murder in the robbery of the J. .c. Thompson jewelry store in that city on September 18, last.

"Vopper" was arrested before Robinson reached Boston. The Grand Rapids police tried to "third degree" him into confession, but he held out. The day Robinson was arrested the Grand Rapids police told "Vopper" that Lawrence had confessed. He immediately made a confession, the police say, which placed all the blame for the Grand Rapids shooting upon Robinson.

For this confession "Vopper" was reported to have secured a promise of only a manslaughter charge. Robinson's death now leaves his account of the robbery indisputable by any first-hand witness.

Mrs. Wakefield's Testimony Read

NEW HAVEN, Ct., July 22.—Despite objections from the attorney for the defence Stenographer Holmes continued his reading today of the testimony given at her first trial by Mrs. Wakefield. This testimony read today related to the first attempt of Plew to chloroform Wakefield in his home in Bristol.

WINSTED, Ct., July 22.—It has been suggested to the Winsted Civic and the Business Men's Associations that Winsted set aside a day each Summer for rat catching.

COURT IS STUNNED BY NEWS

The suicide of Lawrence Robinson was announced in the most dramatic scene ever enacted in Massachusetts courts when court opened today for the third day of Robinson's trial.

Neither the jurors nor the majority of the spectators had any inkling of the facts when court opened.

At four minutes past nine, District Attorney Pelletier entered the crowded court room. He was followed by his assistant, Attorney Webber. Behind them came the two Blanchards, Robinson's attorneys.

The sober faces of the attorneys told the spectators that something was wrong, and there was a little stir of awakened interest.

After the Blanchards came Captain Ainsley C. Armstrong of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation. Then Medical Examiner Magrath. Sheriff Quinn followed.

At 9:06 the jury, escorted by four court officers, filed in and took their places in the jury box. They had no idea that anything had happened; and one or two looked toward Robinson's

Fire Burns; Firemen Watch Girl Bathers

GARY, Ind., July 22.—The Town Board at Millers station today ordered the special constable there to compel bathers in Lake Michigan to wear modest bathing suits and prevent tango dancing on the beaches. Yesterday fire broke out near a bathing beach, but members of the village fire department became so distracted watching the pretty girl bathers that the alarm was unheeded until too late to prevent the destruction of a building.

Russian Strike Grows; 200,000 Out

ST. PETERSBURG, July 22.—With more than 200,000 workers on strike in protest against the government methods used to end the labor troubles in Baku and other towns, the industrial situation became serious throughout Russia today. Local street car employes walked out today and traffic was suspended. Leaders of the strike predict that within two days there will be fully half a million persons on strike. Troops are held in readiness for an outbreak of violence.

SENSATIONAL END TO TRIAL OF GUNMAN

"Diamond Chip" Robinson has cheated the law. The man whose trial for the murder of Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton began last Monday committed suicide in his cell at the Charles street jail early today.

He cut the artery in his neck, under the left ear, and also the artery in his wrist at the base of the thumb. For half an hour, while his life-blood flowed, he lay silent and motionless on his cot. At about half past seven, the guards on their rounds found him dead.

His weapon was a tiny sharpened strip of steel. It had been the shank of a shoe, and he had sharpened it by rubbing on the stone floor of his cell, to a cutting edge.

Where he got this strip of steel is a mystery. His own shoes were untouched, and there was no such strip in his slippers. An investigation has been begun to see whether it was smuggled in to him.

Robinson's suicide came two hours before he was to appear in court for the third day of his trial. It became public through the court proceedings, in the most dramatic court scene ever witnessed in Massachusetts. District Attorney Pelletier called Sheriff John Quinn and Medical Examiner Magrath to the stand and drew from them the story of the tragedy. The jury was then dismissed.

The crime for which Robinson was on trial was the shooting of Inspector Norton in the Boylston Cafe on the afternoon of June 19. Norton with others had come to arrest Robinson for a murder in Grand Rapids, laid at his door. A sensational revolver battle resulted in Norton's death and Robinson's capture.

WROTE FAREWELL LETTERS.

Robinson, before he died, wrote two farewell letters. One was addressed to his wife and mother and was dated last Saturday. The other was to Sheriff Quinn and Robinson's attorney, John H. Blanchard. The date, last Saturday, on one letter is taken as indicating that Robinson had planned his act that long ago.

The letter to his mother and his wife reads:

Boston, Mass., July 18, 1914.

To my dear mother—and to my wife, Dora Alice, the loving sweetheart of my boyhood days, the only woman I have ever loved, and who stuck to me through all the shame into which I plunged her; I bid a last fond GOODBY, and if there is a God Almighty and another world, I pray that I may meet you there.

LAWRENCE.

LOVED HIS MOTHER.

Robinson's deep and sincere feeling for his mother is testified to by Sheriff Quinn. Sheriff Quinn last Monday night took Robinson three letters from his mother, and Robinson cried:

"I can stand the hardest stuff in the world and the hardest death without flinching, but I can't stand to read a letter from my mother." Then he broke down and wept piteously. He begged Sheriff Quinn not to tell anyone this.

The second letter which Robinson left was addressed "To John H. Blanchard, attorney and Honest John Quinn, Sheriff," and it read:

You're up against a hard game when you're out to die to beat it. It seems to be the easiest solution of the whole difficulty; I wouldn't want to go to the chair, for the satisfaction it would give to certain people, and life or a long term in prison for manslaughter are worse than death, and I know what I am talking about; I hate this on account of the sheriff, who though very strict is a MAN, and my attorneys, Mr. John H. Blanchard and Mr. Hugh C. Blanchard, who have gone to an immense amount of trouble and expense to prepare my defence.

Robinson summed up his whole philosophy in the first sentences of that letter. "You're up against a hard game when you've got to die to beat it." He had, in talk with visitors during the past few days, expressed a lively fear of the chair or of a long prison term.

He had thought over his situation, and as he himself said, could see only death at the end.

How well his plans were laid was

ROBINSON BIDS FAREWELL TO MOTHER AND WIFE IN LAST THRILLING LETTER

Here is Robinson's farewell letter to his wife and to his mother:

"Boston, Mass., July 18, 1914.

"To my dear mother—and to my wife, Dora Alice, the loving sweetheart of my boyhood days, the only woman I have ever loved, and who stuck to me through all the shame into which I plunged her: I bid a last fond goodby, and if there is a God Almighty and another world I pray that I may meet you there.

HAD TO DIE TO BEAT GAME, HIS NOTE SAYS

evidenced by the perfect success of his scheme. No one suspected any such plan on his part until he was found dead.

VERY QUIET IN JAIL.

For one thing, during his stay in prison, he had maintained a quiet and orderly life. He and Sheriff Quinn were friendly, and the sheriff was glad to grant him any little favors.

Sheriff Quinn tells how on the first day of the trial, driving back to jail they passed the Commonwealth Hotel, and Robinson said: "Sheriff, I left six silk shirts in there."

The sheriff immediately stopped the van, went in and got the shirts.

He commented today: "Robinson was always quiet and peaceable. A model prisoner." And Robinson's junior counsel, Hugh Blanchard, says a similar thing: "Robinson seemed like a big-hearted, likeable man."

Robinson even carried his pose of content and fearlessness into the court. On his first day he appeared there in the gaudiest tie he had worn when arrested, including a soft collar and loosely knitted tie. But that afternoon he had a new stiff collar and a shave, and on Tuesday he wore a new suit.

SEEMED CONFIDENT.

Except in his breakdown Monday night, of which Sheriff Quinn alone knew, he had seemed perfectly confident. Nevertheless, precautions in his cell were not relaxed. Frequent searches were made to see that he had no weapon; and he was closely watched. But nothing short of constant surveillance could have availed against Robinson's determination. Having planned his suicide at least as early as Saturday, he was the more affected by his mother's letters Monday, and was then so frank and friendly with Sheriff Quinn that the Sheriff was assured he need fear no trouble.

Robinson went to bed last night as usual, and seemed to drop at once to sleep. Guards passed during the night and saw him lying on his cot, heard his regular breathing. Whether he slept or not, no one will ever know.

At a little after six this morning a guard passed the door on his regular rounds. He saw Robinson was awake, lying in his cot, and called:

"How are you feeling today?"

REPLIED IN WEAK TONE.

"Oh, all right," Robinson replied weakly. The guard noticed his tones were weak, but supposed he was still drowsy. It is possible he may already have opened his arteries and he may have been bleeding to death when the guard spoke to him.

THREE JAIL OFFICERS FIND ROBINSON DEAD

At half past seven, the usual time for Robinson to arise, three officers went to his cell. He was in cell Number Thirty-One, in the east wing of the jail, known as Murderer's Row. This cell adjoins that occupied by Richman while he was awaiting trial for the murder of Avis Linnell, and before he incrated himself in a manner that amounted to confession.

The officers who went to the cell were Greer, McIntosh and Phillips. As they unlocked the door they saw Robinson lying, as usual, his legs doubled up in his cell, fully clothed.

When he did not stir at the grating of the lock they guessed something was wrong and sprang across the cell, lifting the bed clothes. The blood that had saturated the under sheet told its own story. Robinson was dead.

SUMMONED SHERIFF.

The officers immediately summoned Sheriff Quinn. He took a look at the body, and seemed to age ten years in that moment. It — a terrific shock to the sheriff, who likes to rule his prisoners by kindness as well as by lock and key, and who had counted Robinson his friend.

He felt for Robinson's pulse, and there was none. There was nothing to do save notify the medical examiner, and at 7:40 Doctor Magrath was called by telephone, told that Robinson was dead, and asked to come to the jail as soon as possible.

Dr. Magrath did not reach the jail till 8:30. By that time Sheriff Quinn had notified District Attorney Pelletier, and the police had heard. The rumor of the suicide began to go abroad through the city.

Dr. Magrath made a very brief examination of the body and then came with Sheriff Quinn to the courthouse, where they consulted with District Attorney Pelletier. The news was a refund shock to the district attorney, and he seemed to feel it as deeply as did Sheriff Quinn, in whose custody Robinson was.

BLANCHARD IS TOLD.

While the three officials were discussing the situation, John H. Blanchard, Robinson's senior counsel, entered. He had been on his way from his office to the court when he heard the rumor, and it was repeated to him again in the corridors of the court. Blanchard, three officers went to his cell. LETTERS SHOW MOTHER'S LOVE FOR ERRING AND WAYWARD SON

Two letters from Mrs. Robinson, the mother of the gunman, one received by Attorney John H. Blanchard and another by a friend, display all the love that any mother could have for a wayward son.

The letter to the friend reads:

Dear Sir:

I noticed in one of the Boston papers that you are a friend of my son, Lawrence; also from a friend in Boston I learn you are the only one permitted to see him. I have been sending him letters every week, asking this same friend to see that they reach him.

I am extremely anxious to hear from some one who has seen him since he was hurt—this day three weeks ago—June 19, and who will tell me just how he is and if he has received my letters. HE MUST NOT THINK FOR ONE MOMENT THAT I'VE FORSAKEN HIM BECAUSE I'M NOT IN BOSTON. HE HAS ALL THE LOVE THAT A MOTHER'S HEART CAN GIVE HIM, AND IF YOU THINK IT WOULD COMFORT OR HELP HIS CASE EVER SO LITTLE I WILL COME TO HIM.

HE HAS NEVER GIVEN ME AN UNKIND WORD, AND, HOWEVER COLDLY THE WORLD MAY THINK OF HIM, I'VE ONLY LOVE AND TENDERNESS FOR HIM.

I realize I'm asking considerable in taking your valuable time and requesting a reply to this, but I have heard that you are not only a great man, but a kind-hearted, considerate one.

I pray hourly that you may save my boy, and I feel you will.

If he needs any little luxuries, being sick, I'd like that he had them, and have told this friend to see to it.

If you'd kindly let me know just how he is, and if they are kind to him, and if he was able to write only a few words to me. I've no desire to do anything you would not approve of or have him in any way he shouldn't.

BUT MY HEART ACHES TO HEAR DIRECTLY FROM HIM.

I also wish to avoid any notoriety if possible, yet at the same time extremely anxious to do everything on earth I can to aid or help him. Trusting to hear, if only a few lines, from you, I remain, yours truly,

MRS. J. ROBINSON.

The letter to Attorney Blanchard reads:

Washington Courthouse, O.

July 17.

John H. Blanchard, Attorney,

Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir: I noticed in the newspapers that you had been retained as one of the attorneys for the defence of my son, Lawrence Robinson. As I have had no direct communication from him I am very anxious to know as to his condition and what is being done with his case.

I have written a number of letters to my boy and have sent them to an acquaintance there in Boston to be delivered to him through the district attorney's office, but as I have received no word from him, wondered if any of them reached him.

I am anxious and willing to do all in my power to help his case along. He is greatly to be pitied, my poor boy.

I would like very much to hear from him personally, and, if the law will allow, have him write me.

Please let me hear from you as soon as possible, and greatly oblige Yours truly,

MRS. J. ROBINSON.

COUNSEL FOR DEAD PRISONER SAYS HE WAS ILL FOR DAYS

When it was subbested to Attorney J. H. Blanchard that Robinson might have reasoned in deciding to kill himself that the best he could expect was a sentence of twenty years' imprisonment if he escaped life imprisonment, or a death sentence, Mr. Blanchard said:

"I don't know—that may be true. It is all a mystery to me—what could have induced him to commit suicide. For the life of me I can see no reason for it.

"Robinson had been ill in jail since the trial. He was afflicted with a specially severe attack of intestinal trouble. He had not eaten a square meal at the court house. When I talked to him yesterday he was confident of acquittal. He was cheerful and bright. He was a man who had spent most of his life in the open air. It may be that the prospect of imprisonment for an indefinite period resulted in a serious mental depression and influenced him.

"He was somewhat depressed when we first took charge of the case, but when we began to work hard on the defence and after he realized how great was the fight that would be put up in his defence, he brightened up and seemed uniformly cheerful. The last time I saw him was yesterday and then he was confident of acquittal."

NO COMMENT ON DEATH FROM JUDGE KEATING

Judge Keating, who has presided in the case, refused to comment upon the tragedy, except to congratulate the Blanchards upon their conduct of the case so far as it had progressed. He said: "I don't care to make any statement. It has been left for the District Attorney to say what he thinks proper."

Immediately after the court proceedings, the corridors thronged with excited men and women, and question and answer flew fast. Sheriff Quinn spoke in terms of grief and sorrow of the dead man. District Attorney Pelletier issued a formal statement of the facts. He said:

PELLETIER'S STATEMENT.

Robinson committed suicide sometime after 4 o'clock this morning. He cut his jugular and left wrist with a small piece of steel supposed to have been taken from his shoe and sharpened by friction on some hard substance. He made no outcry. He was found dead in his cell when the guards made their regular rounds at 7:50 o'clock this morning.

John H. Blanchard, Robinson's senior counsel, felt the tragedy keenly. He said:

"I talked with Robinson yesterday afternoon and he seemed in the best of spirits, and satisfied with the progress of his case.

"I do not know where he got the steel with which he took his life. I understand they are investigating that.

Robinson's junior counsel and the elder Blanchard's son, Hugh C. Blanchard, said:

"We had given Robinson hope of acquittal. In our opinion he had no reason to fear a first degree verdict. He was to have taken the stand in his own defence. He seemed to me a big-hearted, good-natured man. We had Dr. J. F. Coupal, as a medical expert, and William J. Burns of the United States Cartridge Company of Lowell as our expert on revolvers."

Several Western witnesses came on to testify at the trial if wanted. Their evidence against Robinson was purely circumstantial. The main points were that Robinson had occupied a room across the street from the jewelry store which was robbed, and that after the robbery he went to Toledo, where some of the stolen jewels were afterward sold.

Joseph Dudby, the Pittsburgh bellboy who was with Robinson in the Boylston Cafe when the police officials entered, and who was indicted with Robinson on a first degree murder charge, will not be brought to trial on the charge. He will be sent to a trade murder and jewel robbery in Grand Rapids that Robinson was arrested in the Boylston Cafe on the afternoon when he shot Inspector Norton.

DRAMATIC SCENE IN COURT ROOM AS SUICIDE IS ANNOUNCED

AWAITING JURY AND CROWD GASP AT NEWS

cage to see whether the prisoner was yet in his place.

DEATH IS ANNOUNCED.

At 9:08 Judge Keating entered and took his place upon the bench.

Mr. Pelletier, the District Attorney, arose at once and said:

"May it please the court, from information that has come to us, it appears that the defendant at the bar, Lawrence Robinson, is dead."

The jurors sat forward in their seats sharply, and every sign of lack of interest vanished. A simultaneous gasp went over the court room, and from one of the three women spectators came a startled exclamation.

Mr. Pelletier continued: "I will call Sheriff Quinn to the stand."

QUINN TAKES STAND.

Sheriff John Quinn walked from his place behind Mr. Pelletier to the end of the clerk's bench, and was sworn by Clerk John J. Manning. Then he took the witness stand and was questioned by Mr. Pelletier. Upon every word, the listeners leaned forward to hear. The Sheriff spoke evenly and clearly, but it was evident that he was suffering bitterly.

The jurymen were leaning forward not to miss a single word.

Mr. Pelletier asked, in the usual form with a witness:

Q.—What is your name? A.—John Quinn, Jr.

Q.—What is your occupation? A.—I am sheriff of Suffolk County.

Q.—As sheriff, you had custody of the defendant at the bar, Lawrence Robinson, had you not? A.—Yes.

District Attorney Pelletier paused for a minute before the next question, and there was not a sound in the courtroom. He asked at last:

"Where is he now?"

Sheriff Quinn answered steadily: "He is dead?"

Then questions and answers came faster:

Q.—When did he die? A.—This morning.

Q.—Where did he die? A.—In the jail.

Q.—In what part of the jail did he die? A.—In the north wing.

Q.—In his cell? A.—In his cell.

Q.—What time was this? A.—At twenty-five minutes past seven.

Q.—Did you call a doctor? A.—Yes, I did.

Q.—What doctor did you call? A.—Doctor Magrath, the medical examiner.

Mr. Pelletier said: "That will do. I will call Dr. Magrath."

Dr. Magrath, who was on the stand when court adjourned last night, took his place on the witness stand. He had testified yesterday how Inspector Norton was killed, and had described the fatal wound. Now he was to tell how Norton's slayer had died.

Dr. Magrath was asked:

Q.—What is your name? A.—George Burgess Magrath.

Q.—What is your profession? A.—Doctor.

Q.—What is your office? A.—Medical examiner of Suffolk County.

Q.—Were you called to the Charles street jail today? A.—Yes, at about 7:41 this morning.

Q.—When did you get to the jail? A.—At 8:20.

FOUND ROBINSON DEAD.

Q.—What did you find? A.—I found Robinson dead.

Q.—How long had he been dead? A.—About an hour.

Q.—What caused his death? A.—Hemorrhage from two wounds.

Q.—What were those wounds? A.—One wound was a jagged cut on his left wrist, half an inch from the base of the thumb. The other was on the left side of the neck, near the ear.

Q.—How had the two wounds been inflicted? A.—By persistent strokes of some cutting instrument.

Q.—Did you find the instrument? A.—I did.

Dr. Magrath drew it from his pocket. It was a nib of steel about five inches long and an inch wide, with a hole in each end, and slightly bent. One side for half its length had been sharpened to a keen edge.

Q.—What is that? A.—A piece of steel. From its quality and shape I should say it was a steel shoe shank.

Q.—How was the body lying when you found it? A.—The body was lying on the bed with the legs drawn up in a perfectly natural position. The body was lying on the left side.

Q.—How would you say the wounds were inflicted? A.—The wounds were self inflicted.

Q.—Was death instantaneous? A.—No. I should say death occurred from twenty to forty minutes after the wounds were inflicted. Blood had saturated the bed clothing.

This ended Dr. Magrath's testimony and he left the stand. After a moment Judge Keating rose and turned to the jury. They started to rise.

"You need not rise, gentlemen," he said. "In view of the death of Lawrence Robinson, your duties are now at an end. You are discharged."

In five minutes more the courtroom was cleared and the Law's business with Lawrence Robinson was done.

Joseph Duddy, Robinson's pal, who was with Robinson at the time of the shooting of Inspector Norton in the Boylston cafe. Duddy is now awaiting trial.

MRS. NORTON GRIEVES FOR MRS. ROBINSON

Mrs. Hannah Norton, the aged mother of the late Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, of No. 215 Hancock street, Dorchester, when told today of the death of Robinson, said that her first feeling was one of sorrow for Robinson's aged mother in Washington Courthouse, Ohio. She said:

"His poor mother will feel this. She will know what I have passed through. I've forgiven that long ago. Now that he's dead, she can feel for me.

"Ever since Tom left me, I've done nothing else but think of him. He was so good to me. Now this mother away off in another State is suffering as I have suffered. It's a terrible thing of mine.

"But all this is so dreadful. But I have forgiven all. I don't want to do anybody harm. I'm a lone woman, broken in spirit. Nobody cares for me as did Tom. I can almost hear his footsteps on my door now. He would come and say something good to me. I've missed him so much.

LOVED HER BOY.

"This mother away off, I understand, wrote to her son and he did not write to her. She's a mother and she feels for her boy, just as I am feeling. I pity her. Though her son killed my boy, yet I would do all in my power to comfort her. We don't live very long in this world, and when you get old no one cares much for you. You're in the way. But my dear Tom did not feel this way.

"It's all over. My heart is broken with my sorrow. If Tom could only have buried me. That other mother may be saying, 'If I had lost my boy only when he was younger, when he was a little fellow before he grew up to bring this disgrace upon me.'

"I suppose that mother is saying this. She's a mother and she has a mother's feelings and it would not be right for me to say anything that I or will be comforting about her.

"But if I could only see poor Tom, if I can't sleep nights for thinking about him. If I could only see him once more and hear his voice that would be the only joy that I would wish for.

STORY OF CRIME IN THE BOYLSTON CAFE

The crime for which Robinson was placed on trial last Monday morning was the most dramatic in Boston police history of recent years. It included a gun battle in the Boylston Cafe during which Robinson shot Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, a running chase through crowded Boylston street during which officers on foot, in automobiles and on horseback and on foot pursued Robinson as he ran, finally capturing him near the entrance to the Hotel Brewster.

District Attorney Pelletier, in opening the case for the government yesterday, told how the police had received word that Robinson had followed the Ringling & Bailey circus to Boston. The word was brought to police headquarters by the Pinkerton detectives. Captain Ainsley Armstrong at police headquarters assigned Inspector Norton and Officer Claflin and McCarthy to go with the Pinkertons and arrest Robinson.

TIPPED RED TO PRISONER.

District Attorney Pelletier, during his opening yesterday, said, in continuing the story of the crime:

"Armstrong told the officers to take their guns and if there was any shooting to shoot first. The party went first to the Common and then to the cafe, where they found Robinson and Joseph Duddy seated at a table.

"Now are officers from police headquarters," Inspector Norton said and then Robinson and Duddy jumped up and there was a struggle," continued the district attorney. "Claflin engaged Duddy and Norton and McCarthy seized Robinson. As Norton struggled with Robinson he said: 'Get my stick from my pocket.'

"Then Robinson said, 'Don't hit me, I'll go with you.' Norton relaxed his grip. Then Robinson, who was partly on the floor and partly on his side, pulled his gun and let Norton have it.

"Then Miller entered Norton's body in the breast and came out behind. He was taken to the Relief Hospital and died there that night.

"The gun was wrenched from Robinson's hand by a Pinkerton man, and Robinson ran for the door. Officer Claflin, who had the twisters on Duddy, fired four shots at Robinson as he ran, hitting him three times."

BANDIT OVERPOWERED.

Mr. Pelletier then described the capture of Robinson on the street, and told the jury man they would probably hear conflicting testimony, particularly in regard to the two automatic revolvers. He said a policeman from the street, running down into the cafe, arrested by mistake a Pinkerton man, who had an automatic gun in his hand. One witness would say this was the gun taken from Robinson, he said.

A magazine from an automatic gun was found on the floor of the cafe, he said, with one chamber fired, and also an empty shell and a steel-jacketed bullet.

In regard to the arrest, Mr. Pelletier insisted that although the officers had a right to arrest Robinson upon "reasonable suspicion" without a warrant—for there was no warrant in this instance—the State would go further. It had witnesses here from Grand Rapids, Mich., and Toledo, to show that the arrest was reasonable.

DUDDY, PAL OF ROBINSON, IS A PITTSBURGH BOY

Joseph Duddy, "pal" of Lawrence Robinson, who was at the Boylston Cafe with Robinson on the afternoon of the shooting of Inspector Norton, and who is under indictment of murder in the first degree awaiting trial in the Charles street jail, came from Pittsburgh.

It is believed that Robinson met this young man in this city and that they became firm pals. Duddy is but twenty-six years old and well known in Pittsburgh.

While in jail his father, Patrick J. Duddy, came on to see the young man and to engage counsel for him. Mr. Duddy had not seen his son since the first of the year until he met him in jail.

The young man had been in Niagara, Toledo, Cleveland and this city.

He wrote several letters to his home and his father was under the impression that he was working in hotels as a bellboy. He was not aware that his son was in Boston until notified of his arrest.

'GENTLEMAN BANDIT' QUICKLY WON FAIR HEARTS IN BOSTON

POLITENESS LED WAY TO SOCIAL SUCCESS

The social side of Lawrence Robinson's life in Boston was most other sentimentally and entertaining brilliant and successful than Dud Sam would do.

Robinson made himself very pleasant to Miss Esther Feldman, a strikingly handsome girl at The Summit, a confectionery store at the corner of Boylston street and Ashburton place, not far from the Commonwealth Hotel, where Robinson and Duddy were lodged.

Every day for five or six weeks, sometimes twice a day, Robinson came to the store for candy and soda. He used the name "Spencer."

Miss Feldman, knowing that a pleasant strength is much more attractive to customers than a distant and freezing one, was courteous and attentive to the well-dressed patron who spent money so freely.

INVITED HER OUT.

He invited Miss Feldman several times to accompany him to the theatre or on automobile rides. But that was much farther than the girl cared to go, with such an agreeable man as "Spencer" was. She made conventional excuse, but was so tactful about it that the feelings of the easygoing "Spencer" were not hurt in the least.

Robinson told Miss Feldman that he had just inherited $10,000 and that he had taken up the tango, preparatory to going to some seaside resort where dancing would be necessary for social success.

Miss Catherine Crawford, leading lady of the Howard Stock Company, met Robinson under his name of "Spencer." Robinson already knew Miss Ida Gerber of the same company, and through her secured an introduction to Miss Crawford.

Robinson tried to get Miss Crawford to sell some diamonds for him. They were doubtless part o fthe loot from the Grand Rapids robbery and murder.

Whatever diamonds they were, the proposition did not attract Miss Crawford.

Robinson paid considerable attention to actresses in Boston and was always willing to take them to lunch, dances and auto rides.

"TRUSTY" ATKINS SAYS SUICIDE WAS CALM THIS MORNING

Chester J. Atkins, a "trusty" at the jail, said: "I was a trusty at the Charles street jail. That privilege allowed me to roam about the corridors. I often saw Robinson. He had nothing to say.

"This morning there was some excitement near the cell door of his cell. I went there and saw Robinson lying on his cot. A crowd of sheriffs and guards gathered.

"He had a deep gash on his left wrist. The blood was flowing freely. The wound on his throat did not extend from ear to ear. It was in front under the chin and I should say that it cut the jugular vein.

"He must have used considerable force to leave the bit of steel which he killed himself. His own shoes were intact, and in the loose slippers he often wore there is no such slip of steel as this. It may have been smuggled in to him."

PELLETIER AND JUDGE KEATING LAUD ROBINSON'S COUNSEL

"I just want to say" announced the District Attorney, Pelletier, "that the news of Robinson's death came as a great shock to us. His counsel, Mr. Blanchard and Mr. Blanchard's son, were putting up a great fight in his behalf and had left no stone unturned in the preparation of his defence. Mr. Justice Keating who was presiding at the trial has said to me this morning that I might say for Mr. Blanchard and his son that he offered congratulations of the court to them for the zeal shown in the preparation of the case and their ability manifested during the two days in court, and that their attitude from the beginning as counsel for Robinson had been all that any court or any community could desire in counsel."

MOTHER OF VICTIM PITIES MOTHER OF SUICIDE SON

How I pity poor Robinson's mother. I wish some one would tell her for me that I have forgiven her poor boy long ago. We are both mothers. We have both lost our boys.—Mrs. Hannah Norton, mother of Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, killed by Lawrence Robinson.

MAGRATH SAYS DEATH WEAPON A MYSTERY IN ROBINSON SUICIDE

Medical Examiner Magrath, after his testimony in court, when he told of Robinson's suicide, said:

"Robinson was lying in a perfectly natural position when I got there. He had lost about three pints of blood. He died apparently peacefully and quietly—knew he was going, and lay there and let his life flow away.

"It must have been several minutes from the time he cut himself till he died.

"There is absolute mystery about how he got the slip of steel with

TRAGIC FATE MARKED ROBINSON'S CAREER FROM HIS BIRTH

PRE-NATAL INFLUENCE IS REVEALED IN BOY

Lawrence Robinson, known to the police the length and breadth of the country, as "Diamond Chip" Robinson, with several aliases, was born in the Ohio town of Washington Courthouse, thirty-two years ago.

He was the son of Jennie Robinson, sister of the village postmaster. According to the tale told in Washington Courthouse, the child was foredoomed to a life of violence, owing to a strange prenatal influence.

Jennie Robinson, his mother, loved James Smith, son of a former chief of police of Washington Courthouse. The girl trusted Smith and yielded to him. But, when she besought him to marry her and to save her good name, Smith refused and left the town.

PRE-NATAL INFLUENCE.

Frantic with grief and rage, the distracted girl planned revenge upon the man who had shattered her life. She secured a revolver. She practiced with the weapon assiduously. She became an expert shot.

All this was only a few months before the child was born. The girl's brain was obsessed by the thought of vengeance.

Having acquired expertness with the revolver, the girl set out upon the trail of the recreant Smith. Accompanied by one of her men relatives, to whom she had told her unfortunate secret, the girl pursued Smith through several Western States.

Jennie Robinson's pursuit was in vain. Smith was never located by the girl. A few years later the news of Smith's death in a far western State came to Washington Courthouse.

Failing in her pursuit and realizing that the time was approaching when she would need rest and care, Jennie Robinson returned to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Robinson, at Washington Courthouse. There her child was born, a lusty boy.

HATED NAME OF BOY'S FATHER.

Jennie Robinson named this boy Lawrence Robinson. She made no attempt to give him the name of Smith. She hated the sound of the father's name with all the wrath and scorn of a girl who had loved and whose love had been abused.

A few years later Jennie Robinson was "courted honorably" by a well-to-do business man named James McKitterick, who married her and made her happy through many years. McKitterick died and the widow again returned to her girlhood home at Washington Courthouse. After McKitterick's death she took her maiden name, and is today known as Mrs. Jennie Robinson.

Lawrence Robinson was brought up mainly by his maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Robinson. He was a problem from the first. He grew strong, with a kind of prepossessing appearance. But he was wilful and wayward.

After grammar school he entered a shoe factory. He tired of that and became a telegraph operator. His grandparents died. Robinson left the peaceful country town, for whose life and standards he had little use, and joined a circus.

HIS BLASTED ROMANCE.

Robinson had only one tie left in Washington Courthouse. This was a sweet girl named Dora Hard, daughter of a respectable family. Dora had been fascinated by Robinson. When he went away he carried her promise of affection. On occasional trips back to Washington Courthouse Robinson kept up his friendship with the girl, who became more and more in love with him. The country youth adapted himself readily to the traveling life. His wore better clothes. He acquired what passed in the country for a real polished air. To simple Dora Hard the man seemed a superior being.

One thing to Lawrence Robinson's credit, it is not known that he ever tried to take base advantage of Dora Hard's loving trust. He wooed and married the girl. Their married life was not happy because Robinson's mode of living horrified his wife when the truth of it was finally forced upon her. She is now back at Washington Courthouse, dying from tuberculosis and a broken heart.

Robinson took his young wife to Cincinnati. He told her he was a ticket seller with a circus. But he was more of a crook than a ticket seller. He was a professional pickpocket, following the circus crowds. Occasionally he did work as a candy "butcher" or salesman, but that was more for the profit in "short-changing" the patrons, rather than for the petty profits from candy sales. In those days many of the smaller circuses winked at organized looting of the public by its own employes and by the pickpockets and other followers.

ALWAYS READY FOR A FIGHT.

Robinson acquired a reputation as a skilful pickpocket, a splendidly dressed man, but one terribly short-tempered, on account of his tendency to fight. He was shunned by many of the older crooks, who dislike to get into any physical encounter with the authorities. Robinson knocked down the chief of police of Reading, Cal., who tried to arrest him.

As time went on, Robinson prospered and became quite the gentleman, from the underworld point of view.

Here were some of the characteristics he acquired:

His feet were regularly pedicured and his fingernails and toenails powdered and polished.

Years of practice had been spent to draw a revolver in a flash and fire it on the draw.

An hour each day was devoted to gymnasium exercises, that he might be physically perfect in case of a battle.

Worked with indefatigable enthusiasm to become proficient in the latest dances in order to mingle with the exclusive and rob them of their jewels.

Was a trained vocalist and an expert pianist, his long, slender fingers trained to pocket picking making him especially accomplished.

Had a suit of clothes for every day of the week, and in each were constructed secret chamois pockets in which he carried jewelry and blue banknotes.

Never used drugs, as do most "gentleman criminals," and drank only pure vintage wines in moderation while giving his frequent lavish entertainments.

Talked fluently of high art and advanced literature, including the "New Thought" tenets.

NAMED "DIAMOND CHIP."

Robinson was given the sobriquet of "Diamond Chip" from his passion for the queen of gems.

In 1909 Robinson was arrested at Dayton, O., as a pickpocket.

In 1910 he was arrested as a pickpocket in Cincinnati, where he was living. He dashed into a tenement house to escape capture, and when the police came in they found him holding a baby in his arms and pretending that it was his baby and his home. He had striven the startled mother out the other way and had picked up the child in a dual wily effort to fool his pursuers. The police chuckled long over this ingenious but unsuccessful trick of "Diamond Chip."

Robinson was sent to the Cincinnati workhouse. But even then he managed to keep his wife ignorant. He pretended that he had been away with the circus.

Next Robinson was arrested at Covington, Ky., and was given two years at Frankfort State Prison. His wife learned the truth, fell ill and developed the disease which is now sapping her life away.

Robinson came out of Frankfort Prison a desperate and dangerous man. His tendency to fight had developed into a "gun man," one who went armed and who would shoot to kill. Thereafter Robinson carried a revolver, not the old-fashioned revolving chamber type, but the latest thing in killing—the automatic.

FINDS PARTNER IN CRIME.

Out of prison Robinson struck up an evil partnership with a young man named Walter Lawrence, known to the police as "Vopper." He was a less determined chap than Robinson, but equally bent on getting a living without honest work.

Robinson and Lawrence went to Grand Rapids, Mich., last September. There began the chain of events which led up to today's suicide at Charles street jail by Robinson.

"Diamond Chip" and "Vopper" made a daylight robbery of the jewelry store of John J. Thompson. They entered the store at the close of the afternoon of September 18. Each was armed. In the store were John N. Thompson, cousin of the proprietor, Edward Smith, a collector, and Paul Townsend, watchmaker. Two minutes later the two robbers came out on the run, leaving John N. Thompson and Edward Smith dead on the floor, with bullets through the heart, and Paul Townsend, a watchmaker, dying from a shot through the lung.

$3,500 STORE ROBBERY.

The robbers had taken $3,500 worth of diamond rings and watches as they fled. They dashed across the street, through an alley and made their escape. They drifted down by easy stages into Ohio and Kentucky.

The Michigan authorities offered $1,000 reward and the Jewelers' Security Alliance offered another thousand for the capture of both murderers of the jewelers and murderers. The police of Grand Rapids and the county officers of Kent County, in which Grand Rapids is located, made frantic efforts to catch the fugitives. They made many arrests. They actually did railroad Roy Blackburn, a Chicago bartender, out to Grand Rapids on a charge of being one of the robbers. Blackburn declared his innocence and when he was brought to trial the jury disagreed. Blackburn was remanded for another trial, but suddenly his innocence was established through the arrest of "Vopper" Lawrence in Newport, Ky., where "Vopper" had had the misfortune to get in a fight with a baker.

"Vopper" had been trailed by a Grand Rapids detective who figured all along that Blackburn was innocent. "Vopper" was brought back to Grand Rapids, but he denied knowing anything about the robbery of the jewelry store. The police worked on him. They got wind of "Diamond Chip" Robinson having been "Vopper's" associate. Word was sent broadcast to arrest Robinson.

SOUGHT FIELD IN THE EAST.

Robinson had started East, a territory which he had not tried to operate in before. He brought with him a young man named Joseph Duddy, a Pittsburgher, whom Robinson had picked up in Toledo. Duddy was working there as a bellboy when Robinson came through from Grand Rapids.

Robinson and Duddy arrived in Boston early in June. The Pinkertons were on his trail. On Friday afternoon, June 19, while Robinson and Duddy were eating in the Boylston Cafe, officers came in to arrest them. Then came the shooting which cost the life of Police Inspector Tom Norton of the Boston headquarters staff.

When the news of the arrest of Robinson and Dudey and the shooting of Norton was flashed to Grand Rapids, the police of that city tried immediately to pry a confession out of "Vopper" Lawrence, who was being held for the jewelry robbery and slaying.

The police told "Vopper" that Robinson had confessed, throwing the blame on him. They worked on "Vopper's" mind until he broke down and declared that Robinson had done all the shooting in the jewelry store and that the only shot he, "Vopper," had fired, was one which wounded Thompson in the wrist. It was Robinson's shooting, "Vopper" said, that cost the three lives.

It is reported that "Vopper" Lawrence has reconciled with the Grand Rapids prosecuting officers, so that he will be given a manslaughter term, in return for his confession.

The desperate crimes which marked the latter part of Lawrence Robinson's life seem to bear out the Washington Courthouse theory that he was "marked" from birth with a tendency to weapons.

COLD-BLOODED SLAUGHTER.

The Grand Rapids triple-killing was a cold-blooded and heartless slaughter of three men. Whoever did the shooting, whether it was Robinson or "Vopper" Lawrence, shot remorselessly and to kill. The accuracy of the bullets—two through the heart and one through the neck—proves that.

In his shooting of Police Inspector Thomas J. Norton, Robinson showed the same reckless desperation. He was the fighting shot to kill.

However much medical men may scoff at the theory of prenatal influences, the theory is borne out in the life of Lawrence (Diamond Chip) Robinson.

If ever an unborn child could be subjected to material influences, then the passion of Jennie Robinson for revenge upon the man she had loved and trusted would have exercised its influence upon the unborn child-to-be.

Lawrence Robinson was shunned by most of the lawbreaking gentry. He was considered too dangerous, because he was "on the shoot," as the criminals say.

GUNMAN'S DEATH NOTE TO THE SHERIFF TYPICAL OF HIS CAREER

Here is Robinson's farewell letter left in his cell addressed to "John H. Blanchard, attorney, and Honest John Quinn, sheriff":

"You're up against a hard game when you've got to die to beat it; it seems to be the easiest solution of the whole difficulty; I wouldn't want to go to the chair for the satisfaction it would give to certain people, and life or a long term in prison for manslaughter are worse than death, and I know what I'm talking about; I hate this on account of the sheriff, who, though very strict, is a MAN, and my attorneys, Mr. John H. Blanchard, who have gone to an immense amount of trouble and expense to prepare my defence."

This letter was not signed. It was written on a single sheet of paper.

BABY IN RASH OVER HEAD AND BODY

Took Out All His Hair. Itched and Burned So Could Not Sleep. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Eruption Healed.

Sherman Maine.—"When my baby boy was about three weeks old he broke out with a rash all over his head and body which took out all his hair and itched and burned so had he could not sleep. It came in the form of water blisters and when he would scratch them they would make wet eruptions which continued to grow worse until they were all over his head and body. His clothes would chafe them so that I would have to keep him bandaged.

"I tried many different kinds of soap and remedies but it continued to grow worse until I obtained a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment. I washed him with the Cuticura Soap and then I applied the Cuticura Ointment. I could see that it helped him from the very first. The sore places had taken his hair all out but by the time I had used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment three weeks the eruptions were all healed and his skin is as clear and smooth as ever. He now has a fine head of hair and there has never been any sign of the trouble since." (Signed) Mrs. John Collins, Feb. 19, 1914.

WEBSTER TO TRY NEW AIR 'STUNTS' SATURDAY

Clifford Webster, whose swooping, climbing, diving Burgess-Dunne plane has thrilled and delighted close to a million people in the great series of exhibition flights arranged by the AMERICAN, will surpass his previous performances in a remarkable flight arranged for next Saturday. And this flight, like the others, will mean a chance for you to save money by keen eyes and accurate figuring.

The AMERICAN invites you—urges you—to see this flight, and if you live anywhere along the shore near Boston you cannot very well help it, for Webster is to fly from Marblehead to Nantasket, closely following the shore line throughout the flight.

The climax of the flight will come at Paragon Park, Nantasket, when Webster in ascending spirals will climb two or three thousand feet into the air in an altitude flight surpassing that of last Sunday at Revere, when 20,000 people watched him in awe and strove to estimate just how high he had gone.

Three thousand feet is more than half a mile above the sea. It would seem a mere dot in the sky when he finished his climb. Thousands measured his altitude with the scale printed in the AMERICAN, and wrote their estimate on coupons from the AMERICAN and sent them to this office. The prize winners in that contest will be announced next Sunday.

But a contest more interesting and novel than that is planned in connection with next Saturday's flight. An aeroplane that can climb quickly into the heavens, out of range of an enemy's guns, is invaluable in war. But an aeroplane capable of high and sustained speed is even more valuable. Speed is vital—speed in climbing and speed in flight.

GUESS THE SPEED.

Therefore the contest next Saturday will be in two parts—or rather, there will be two distinct contests. The first will involve an estimate of speed; the second an estimate of altitude.

Webster next Saturday at a little after 2 o'clock will rise from the water at Marblehead, circle and then fly along the shore, passing over the following points: Webster, Marblehead, Swampscott, Lynn Beach, Nahant, Bass Point, Revere Beach, Wollaston Beach, Hough's Neck and Nantasket Beach. He will flight in the vicinity of Nantasket Beach.

Now, an aeroplane's speed is a definite thing. And the distances between these points are a definite thing. Your task is to estimate the time it will take Webster to make certain portions of his flight.

Here are the facts you need to know:

FIRST—Speed of the plane. Webster's Burgess-Dunne plane makes an average speed of slightly over sixty miles an hour. If the wind is strong against its flight, the speed will be lessened, and if the wind is strongly with the plane, the speed will be increased.

SECOND—Velocity of the wind. That is largely your part of the problem. You must judge the strength and direction of the wind in making your estimate.

THIRD—Distance between points. Here is a table of air-line distances along the route Webster will take. But in making your estimates of the time of his flight, you must allow for circling for fighting, for climbing, for deviations from the direct line, and for the irregularities of the shore line. Webster himself says:

"The actual air line distance is about thirty miles but my flight will cover from thirty-five to forty miles."

Therefore, you should make some allowances in considering the table of the figures. Here are the distances measured along Webster's route in an air line:

Marblehead to Swampscott—3½ miles.
Marblehead to Lynn Beach—5½ miles.
Marblehead to Nahant—8½ miles.
Marblehead to Bass Point—10¼ miles.
Marblehead to Revere Beach—12½ miles.
Marblehead to Wollaston Beach 21 miles.
Marblehead to Hough's Neck—24 miles.
Marblehead to Nantasket — 28½ miles.

These are MINIMUM DISTANCES, and allow nothing for any deviation. The measurements are along Webster's route. Thus, the distance from Marblehead to Revere Beach 12½ miles is by way of Swampscott, Lynn Beach, Nahant and Bass Point.

Remember, in this issue of the AMERICAN you will find a coupon. Cut out the coupon. Take the facts here given, your estimate how long you think it will take Webster to fly from Marblehead to Nantasket. Then pick out some spot along the way listed above, and estimate how long it will take him to fly from Marblehead to that point—to Bass Point, for instance, or to Swampscott, or to Hough's Neck.

DON'T GUESS. This isn't guessing. If you estimate how long you think it will take Webster to fly the whole distance, you think it will take him to make the flight, and then fill out your coupon or a copy of it.

But if you estimate on a copy of it, with an estimate, in minutes and seconds, of how long it will take Webster to fly from Marblehead to some point along the way that you have chosen, and also how long it will take him to fly the whole distance, remember you make TWO ESTIMATES, one for the whole distance, and one for part of the way.

THESE COUPONS WITH YOUR ESTIMATES MUST BE IN THE AMERICAN'S PROMOTION DEPARTMENT, No. 7, WINTHROP SQUARE, BEFORE 2 SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

Mail them, or bring them, but see that they are here.

Coupons will be printed every day between now and Saturday, and also in the first edition and the second edition Saturday. You may send in your estimates on these coupons or on copies of them. The coupon today is printed on page 7.

Webster on his flight will keep his own time from point to point; and his time will be accepted as final for purposes of this contest. Your estimates will be compared with his actual time. The person making the best estimate will be awarded $50, and there will be other cash awards. THE PRIZE WINNERS WILL BE ANNOUNCED IN THE SUNDAY AMERICAN.

So much for the first contest. Now for the second.

When Webster alights on the water at Nantasket and has recorded his detailed time for the whole flight, he will take on more gasoline, and begin a flight for altitude.

You are to estimate his altitude as he soars Sunday. For the benefit of those who did not go to Revere last Sunday, that method will be fully explained later.

In next Sunday's AMERICAN, you will find a coupon with blanks for your estimate of that altitude flight. You may use this coupon or a copy of it.

And for the best estimates of Webster's altitude, there will be cash awards.

Thus next Saturday's flights by Webster will mean two contests. You must estimate his SPEED in advance, and you must estimate his ALTITUDE when you see him. You must send in your SPEED estimates before Saturday afternoon, on coupons from the daily AMERICAN, or on copies of them. You must send in ALTITUDE estimates on coupons from next Sunday's papers or on a copy of it.

To estimate his altitude, you will have to go to Nantasket. The flights will be made above the hotels and beach amusement places. From Paragon Park and the Palm Garden, you will be able to see every detail of this flight, or from the big Nantasket Hotel, or Richard's Hotel, or Coleman's restaurant. Wise folks will go early enough to lunch there first, and to try the Old Mill—most unique of amusement devices—and the attractions of Paragon Park.

Our advice is this:

Estimate Webster's speed and send in your estimates. Then go to Nantasket, lunch, have a good time, and watch for Webster and the airship. When he comes, estimate his altitude flight. You may win an award in each contest.

Even if you don't you will see an amazing flight.

And one word more—if weather prevents the flight on Saturday, it will be held Sunday, and the contests will be held just the same.

Hunt Clew in Magnolia Robbery

Police and private detectives are today attempting to find a clew to the identity of the persons who entered the Summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Kenerr of New York and Morristown, N. J., at Magnolia, and escaped with $5,000 worth of jewels.

The cottage is in the most exclusive portion of the resort and is only 200 yards from Oceanside Hotel.

HUERTA CABINET MINISTER FLAYS WILSON POLICY

BY JOHN K. WINKLER.

EL PASO, TEXAS, July 22—Ignacio Bonnet, former minister of the interior and one of the "big four" in the Huerta cabine', has arrived here from Mexico City and is living with the colony of expatriates on the British cruiser Bristol.

Receiving news that the rebels had set a price on his head, he disguised himself as an Indian peon merchant and came in attired in a yellow shirt and cheap woolen trousers without a coat. He willingly and unreservedly discussed Mexican conditions.

"I cannot help being pessimistic regarding the outlook," he said. "Carbajal is a well-balanced man, but I doubt if he will be able to resist the demands of whichever of the four rebel leaders, Zapata, Carranza, Villa or Coreson, proves to have the strongest military force at the back.

"President Wilson's policy is the most monumental piece of cowardice in the world, carrying into practice the unjust theory that the dominant nation has absolute sovereignty over the affairs of the weaker republic. Carried out to the logical conclusion the United States can continue interfering in Mexican affairs until it annexes the country."

The refugee party of 102 crowded together aboard the Bristol like immigrants at Ellis Island. So far the vessel has been unable to charter a steamer to take them to Jamaica.

MANY WIGS IN NURSE'S TRUNK PUZZLE POLICE

Henry Mahan in Bedford street, Concord, has proved to the satisfaction of the police that he has not been off of the Mahan farm for a month, although he admitted knowing Miss Taylor.

Chandler, who is living apart from his wife, makes his home with his mother in Woburn, and has worked in Concord for Mahan. Mahan admitted to the police that Ada Taylor was employed by him in the Spring of 1913, and left Fall. He employs a number of hands, and Chandler, he said, appeared to be more friendly with the woman than the others.

Chandler told Chief West and Sergeant Flint and Albert that he knew the Taylor woman while she worked in the farmhouse, but he had not seen her since last March. When he met her and another woman on Bedford street, near Green street, Boston.

Two months before, some time in January, he said he called upon her at her home, then at No. 87 Myrtle street.

The photograph found in Miss Taylor's trunk is a small snapshot of a man, evidently between twenty-five and thirty years of age, smooth face, dark hair and skin and wearing a soft hat, tilted forward, and with a cigarette in his mouth. The snapshot was found in a locket.

That there is another man still to investigate, the police admit. They have discovered that a man who knew Ada Taylor was in Winthrop on the Sunday before she came to her death, and that she saw him at that time. The man was drinking considerably, and it is thought this may be the man she would not marry because he drank.

AEROPLANE FLIGHT

More Cash Awards

FOR AMERICAN READERS

On Saturday afternoon, July 25, weather permitting, or, in case of bad weather, on Sunday, Webster will make another startling flight in the great Burgess-Dunne seaplane. He will fly from Marblehead to Paragon Park, Nantasket, by way of Swampscott, Lynn Beach, Nahant, Bass Point, Revere Beach, Wollaston Beach, and Houghs Neck. He will make this trip without stop and as fast as he can.

Here is the way you can win another cash money award.

The airline distances between these points and all the available facts about the speed of the great flying machine are given in another column of this paper.

With these facts you can figure out with mathematical certainty how long it will take Webster to make the flight or any part of it.

Put down your careful estimate of the number of minutes and seconds Webster will take to fly from Marblehead to any of the given points in his route and also the time he will take from Marblehead to his landing on the water at Paragon Park, Nantasket.

The person sending in the nearest correct answer will

WIN $50 IN GOLD

Many other cash money awards will be given.

P. A. makes men smoke hungry

Just you get a whiff of "the national joy smoke" and it's dollars to doughnuts you beat it 'cross lots to the nearest store that sells tobacco—and stock up! The flavor and aroma of Prince Albert has got 'em all backed off the boards. It sure will hit the spot with you. Get the drift of that?

PRINCE ALBERT

the national joy smoke

just does all that we say it will do. It can't bite your tongue and it can't parch your throat. All this is because P. A. is made by a patented process that cuts out the bite! Why, this process has simply revolutionized smoking tobacco.

Prince Albert rolls up the bulliest makin's cigarette you or any other man ever smoked. It puts the jolt of joy right into your system.

You can just do "makin's" sunrise to sunset and have a lot of fun. Why, P. A. in a cigarette is absolutely a revelation. You go to it!

Buy Prince Albert everywhere: in the toppy red bags, 5c; tidy red tins, 10c; also in pound and half-pound humidors.

CHALLENGE BY CAILLAUX AS TRIAL OPENS

PARIS, July 22—During an outburst of the worst disorder which has yet marked the trial of Mme Caillaux for the murder of Editor Gaston Calmette of Le Figaro, Joseph Caillaux, husband of the defendant and former Premier and Finance Minister of France, today challenged M. Chenu, counsel for the children of the slain journalist, to fight a duel.

The scene was tensely dramatic and was one of the most thrilling in the modern annals of the Paris courts. It occurred shortly after the third day's session of the famous trial had begun and grew out of circumstances which had arisen yesterday.

For a time it looked as though armed guards would have to clear the courtroom in the Palace of Justice.

M. Caillaux and M. Chenu bellowed accusations at each other while political friends of the former minister and of the slain editor cheered or jeered. Political issues overshadowed all else at the dramatic juncture of the trial today and for the time being the question of Mme. Caillaux's guilt or innocence was forgotten.

The incident which resulted in the duel challenge, the first to grow out of this tragic struggle, came just after Judge Louis Alnard had called the court to order. The courtroom was crowded ,the corridor was filled with fashionably dressed women. When court was convened M. Herbaux, the public prosecutor, read a communication from the government giving notice that the famous "Green documents," which are alleged to show that Caillaux had responsible correspondence with Germany during the Morocco crisis, would not be produced. These documents had been in the possession of Calmette, but after the editor's death were turned over to the government. They showed, according to Caillaux' political enemies, that the former Premier had sold the French Congo to Germany. As soon as M. Herbaux finished reading the communication, Caillaux, in whose breast the taunts of yesterday still burned, leaped to his feet. In bitter terms the former Premier denounced Le Figaro for making use of documents which it could not produce. "That miserable newspaper was reduced to libel and forgery," shouted Caillaux.

Before the former cabinet minister got further, M. Chenu jumped up. Dramatically pointing his finger at Caillaux the lawyer screamed: "Calmette's blood is on your head. Continue your attacks on Le Figaro If you dare."

A roar swept across the spectators' gallery. Caillaux' face was white with rage. He shook with anger and his voice rose to a shriek as he answered: "I will take the responsibility for those attacks. Beware what you say to me. I will make you answer for your words."

Hours before time for the third day's session of Mme Caillaux' trial to begin big crowds began gathering around the Palace of Justice. The building was practically in a state of siege until the reinforcements of Republican guards set out to clear the streets.

There were shouts of "Down with Caillaux," and "Down with the betrayer of France."

CARMAN MAID WAS IN FEAR OF LYNCHING

FREEPORT, N. Y., July 22.—Indications that Nora Coleman, the Carman model, was in fear of lynching when she told her story to the authorities, were contained in a new letter written by her to Mrs. Jennie Howard, a negress, who runs an employment bureau next door.

The letter throws fresh light on events surrounding the shooting of Mrs. Louise Bailey, for which Mrs. Florence Carman is now under indictment. The letter read in part:

"I couldn't be as free wanted me to. In the South when women don't do as they want them to they lynch them." Here the writing broke into an illegible scrawl, in which only a few words could be made out. These indicated that the girl first was afraid of lynching. The letter then referred to the night of the shooting. This part was more legible than the rest. Reference to the firing of the shot was made, after which the letter reads:

"Mrs. Carman came in through the back door with her arms folded and said, 'Celia, for God's sake, go upstairs and stay up there. I never saw her so excited as she was then. Later, after she had gone into another room, and I was about to go upstairs, Dr. Carman came into the kitchen and said gruffly: 'See that you don't come downstairs until I call you.'"

After further illegible writing, the girl said she went to New York on the advice of a negro and was sent to a house on Thirty-eighth street. Nobody asked her anything about the night of the shooting, she said, until she went back to the little courthouse in the country.

By this she probably referred to the Nassau County Courthouse in Mineola, where she was examined before the Grand Jury that indicted Mrs. Carman.

Federal Grand Jury in Mysterious Probe

AGREEMENT IN HALLIAN CASE REPORTED NEAR

An agreement between the opposing sides in the Elsman-Hallian suit-second case is expected before Elsman's trial in the Hingham court on a charge of abducting his former employer's daughter, Fern, is resumed on Friday, it was reported today.

Attorneys Buttimer and Sughrue conferred for an hour following the adjournment of Louis Elsman's trial, and it is understood a basis for a settlement of the charges against Mr. Elsman was reached.

Elsman's testimony was surprising to most of those present at the trial, and Fern Hallian was recalled to deny parts of his story. The gist of the chauffeur's testimony was given in answer to Attorney Sughrue's questions. "She was constantly putting her arms around you?" to which Elsman replied, "Yes, sir."

When both sides had rested their cases pending the preliminary summing up before Judge Kelley the courtroom was cleared of everybody but the judge and the opposing attorneys.

If Cow Blocks Road Stop and Milk Her

ITHACA, July 22—The best way to get rid of a cow that blocks the highway and will not permit an automobile to pass is to stop and milk the cow, according to Carroll Horton of Okmulgee, Okla., who is visiting his father, ex-Supreme Court Justice Horton, here. Young Horton was in an automobile party speeding toward Newfield when the road was blocked by a cow which had sprawled across the road. He got out and milked her, whereupon lossy walked off.

Mrs. Lewis Is Still Mrs. James Hamilton

WASHINGTON, July 22.—The interdiction pronounced by Senator Lewis of Illinois against the use of his Christian name of "James" just because the irreverent abbreviated it to "Jim," and coupled it with "Ham," is now effective in official circles. His name appears now as "Hamilton Lewis," and Mrs. Lewis returned to Washington and across the hotel register she wrote: "Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Chicago, Ill."

FAVORS FUND TO HELP GIRLS MARRY YOUNG

"How can people marry early until motherhood is endowed?" asks Edmund Trowbridge Dana, the Cambridge Socialist-economics expert.

"There are too many women in every way fitted for contentment motherhood who cannot afford to marry, or if they do marry, to give their children the opportunities they ought to have. To my mind the matter of environment is of extreme importance. I have never been able to make up my mind which counted more, a good heredity or the opportunities of the right environment.

"I think it would certainly be well for those best fitted for parenthood, intellectually and otherwise, to marry early, provided they can afford to, from the point of view that otherwise their children will be outnumbered by the children of the less fit, who do marry early."

Nervous Wrecks from Sore Feet; Here Is Cure

The following is absolutely the surest and quickest cure known to science for all foot ailments: Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of Calocide compound in a basin of warm water. Soak the feet in this for full fifteen minutes, gently rubbing the sore parts. The effect is really wonderful. All soreness goes instantly and the feet feel so good you could sing for joy. Corns and bunions can be peeled right off. It gives immediate relief for sore, tender, weary, smelly and aching feet. A twenty-five cent box of Calocide is said to be sufficient to cure the worst feet. It works through the pores and removes the cause of the trouble. Don't waste time on uncertain remedies. Any druggist has Calocide compound in stock or he can get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. It is not a patent medicine. Calocide prepared only by Medical Formula Co., Dayton, Ohio.

"NATIONAL HERO SERIES" NO. 6

William Wallace—Scotland's Great Patriot

FOR nearly seven hundred years the sons and daughters of Scotland have revered the memory of Wallace. It is not too much to say that this will continue for seventy times seven hundred years. When but a youth the love of Personal and National Liberty burned so fiercely in the breast of Wallace that he revolted against England's tyrannous rule. At the head of his gallant band of riders he won skirmish after skirmish, and finally, at the opportune time, quickly organized an army and routed the English at Stirling Bridge. William Wallace admired a good Barley-Malt brew just as do the Scotchmen of to-day Prohibition has ever been a detestable word to the Scotch people. They will not have it enter into their private lives, and the Scotch vote is always registered by a large majority against such sumptuary legislation. In America they have done much to build up the country. Thousands of our solid Scotch citizens are patrons of the honest brews of Anheuser-Busch and have been constant users of BUDWEISER. They have helped to make the annual sales of this world-famed brand exceed those of any other beer by millions of bottles.

SUDDEN STRIKE SETTLEMENT IN BASEBALL WAR PROVES DISAPPOINTMENT TO FANS

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

ALL-STAR LIT OF TENNIS MATHES SCHEDULED FOR TODAY AT LONGWOOD

FRANKIE MACK DEFEATS READ IN FAST BOUT

By JACK CONWAY.

THE boxing promoters' union is not looking for any strike breaker today as the young men who were assigned to box ten rounds each at the Atlas A. A. last night all went through with what they promised to do and gave the deer old fight "fans" one of the best evening's of fighting that we have had since the day of the big wind. There were four bouts in all and each of them furnished the sports with plenty of action.

The final contest of the evening was between Frankie Mack, the popular Beachmont lightweight, and Jack Read, the Australian lightweight champion. Mack put up a grand battle and had a good sized margin in his favor when hostilities ceased.

Leo Flynn, Mack's esteemed manager, wig-wagged for Read to go on a strike in the final stanza when Mack was landing many solid smashes and pushing his opponent around the ring, but the doughty little Australian stuck to his guns like a regular champion and fought back gamely.

The bout was a fast affair, and both boys did good work. Mack, however, scored the most and the majority of his punches were clean ones and landed with a thud. He had a lead in the majority of the rounds.

TERRY BROOKS of this city and Andy Cortez, the husky Brooklyn boxer, put up a slashing whirl. It was a Class AA slugging match and both boys time and again stood toe to toe and exchanged punches.

Brooks was awarded the decision by Referee Moffitt Flaherty. Terry landed the cleaner blows but Cortez put up a fine battle and a draw would not have been a poor decision.

Joe Farren of East Boston surprised the wise men by holding Young Jasper, the North End boy, to a draw. Farren was outweighed by at least ten pounds but managed to hold Jasper off by ever clever boxing and sent many hard punches to Jasper's jaw. Jasper was the best worker at close quarters where he scored with heavy body punches.

It would not be a bad idea to match Farren with a boy of his own weight, as he has been giving the weight advantage when pitted against sluggers who outweigh him from eight to fifteen pounds.

Walter Butler of Beachmont was given the decision over Eddie Flynn, his Lynn rival, in another ten-round encounter. Both boys appeared over trained and a test would not do either of them any harm.

WILLIE RITCHIE, our esteemed lightweight boxer, is today merrily on his way back to dear old Blighty. The former champion sailed from England this morning and is due in this country the first of next week. Ritchie plans to start a hard campaign in the ring when he returns to these shores. He says he will be ready to clash with all the star men in the lightweight class and that he expects to win all of his bouts he believes that he will force Welsh to battle him again.

IT is doubtful whether Welsh will agree to meet Ritchie for at least a year. Freddy is well on his way and he had to wait for many years before he ever received a chance to fight for the championship. Consequently he would be unwise to wait for another tussle with Ritchie just now. The popular little little holder will probably show at some of the music halls in Europe and will not come to this country where he will start on a long theatrical tour.

THERE will be two twelve-round bouts at the Universal A. C. in Cambridge Friday night. "Fighting Joe Hyland of New York will clash with Terry Brooks of this city and Eddie Flynn, the Lynn lightweight, will exchange punches with Jack Coyne who hails from Orange, N. J. There will also be a six-round preliminary contest between Joe Morgan, the Manchester, N. H. bantamweight, and Eddie Mullin of Quincy.

"KID" WILLIAMS, the bantamweight champion, has gone to Atlantic City in order to start training. The Baltimore scrapper has turned down several tempting offers to go on the stage as he declares that a real championship bout should not waste his time performing before the footlights.

SPEAKING of Williams reminds us that Al Shubert, the husky little New Bedford bantamweight, has hurled his hat into the ring and Shubert is one of the best boxers of his weight in these parts and in advances the information that there is nothing would please him better than a tussle with Williams.

College Wonder Now Member of Browns

SUDDEN STRIKE SETTLEMENT DISAPPOINTING

The sudden settlement of the baseball strike, which was scheduled to come to a head today, is a disappointment to many of the players and scores of fans who would like to see the case threshed out as Ban Johnson and the Players' Fraternity willed it should be.

This truce or peace between the Fraternity and organized baseball is short lived, according to many who are well versed in the inside workings of the great diamond game, and they point to the statement of the "Prince of Wales" he had many little scores to settle, and that the Kraft case was only a test.

On all sides Ebbets, whose action prevented the threatened strike, is being made the "goat" today, but the Brooklyn leader suffered before for his tardy action in the Tinker affair of last Winter, when the head of the Dodgers was blamed for this first great coup of the Federal League.

HINT OF FEDS IN STRIKE.

It is rumored today, however, that Ebbets has learned his lesson at that time and that while Ban Johnson, the head of the American League, was calling his forces to arms in New York to wage war on the Players' Union he had quietly tipped the Brooklyn magnate to settle up.

It is also hinted that the Federal League had a hand in the affair and that Mr. Fultz and President Gilmore of the so-called outlaw league are to meet today in New York, but whether in connection with the recent clash or not is not known.

Ebbets denies that any pressure had been brought to bear upon him by the officers of the Newark club in making the deal which cleared away the baseball war clouds.

BAN JOHNSON PLEASED.

President Ban Johnson said after the settlement adjourned:

"The American League was in no way interested in the Kraft case so far as it affected the Brooklyn, Boston, Newark and Nashville clubs. We were drawn in when the Players' Fraternity officers issued what was virtually an ultimatum to our clubs and players.

"I understand that Ebbets takes full responsibility for his action in settling the case as a private club owner. Now that the cause of the trouble is removed, there is no further need of meeting.

"I am glad that the case has been amicably settled without involving the American League, for I can assure you that had we been forced into the fight, we were prepared to go the limit to protect our rights."

FULTZ FORGIVES JOHNSON.

President David L. Fultz of the fraternity issued a statement after the adjustment of the Kraft case, in which he said:

"The Kraft controversy has been settled to the satisfaction of the players, and we trust to the satisfaction of the magnates as well.

"The fraternity is greatly pleased at the outcome and wishes publicly to express its appreciation of the square and manly way in which Mr. Ebbets has faced the issue.

"Mr. Johnson may said some rather rude things about me, and if he knew what I thought of him he would probably resent it. He was doubtless excited, however, and at any rate these hurtful statements shall make no difference in my friendship for him."

OVER THE PLATE

By NICK FLATLEY

BASEBALL, that is the big league brand, may have been played under worse conditions than faced the Red Sox yesterday in the last half of the fifth, but the oldest inhabitant we could find fails to recall any such occasion. A wild wind was sweeping around Fenway, whipping up clouds of dust that threatened to blind the ball players and spectators alike. It was so dark that the West Somerville bleachers were a mere blur on the horizon. Added to that rain was falling.

UNCLE Bill Carrigan protested but Umpire Egan was adamant. When the crowd from the centerfield bleachers started to scramble across the sward toward the covered stands back of first, he should by all the rules of baseball have called a halt. But nothing doing. So the Sox, wrought up, proceeded to hang in the score this several things.

* * *

AGAIN it was Speaker who clouted things up for the enemy. There were two down and the Red Sox crowd was at most lost to view in thick smother off Davy Jones Locker, when the Texas batter drove a fast one through the box. The ball hit second base and caromed off to left, easily letting Hooper, who was perched on second, beat the ensuing deluge in a dash for the plate.

* * *

RAY COLLINS, who, with the walk-out off his mind, was called to put in an afternoon southpawing and forget his vice-presidential responsibilities, missed like one beat bet. It was his third appearance in the box since days, but nevertheless he had all his stuff on display and never should have been shorn of it. He will now perhaps be given a rest until the team gets away on the road. He sure is coming into his old time form again, and in his last few appearances has been pressing Dutch Leonard hard for the pitching honors.

THAT season-old Red Sox failing, inability to get a man around the bases, was in evidence again yesterday in the ninth inning of a game that was pulled off. In the second frame Lewis walked for a starter and was followed by Janvrin after Gardner had fouled. In the next session Collins started things himself with a hot single to right and immediately took second on a wild pitch. But as he remained anchored there while the fun of the list proceeded to fade away.

* * *

BRANCH RICKEY, the new-method Brown manager, is the most optimistic individual in the baseball set to be sure that his pets are going to stay in the running till the race comes to a halt. Having brought them from cellar favorites to contenders in half a season, he can picture them champions of the remaining half is the way the figures it out. One thing is sure, he has plenty of ginger sizzling in the ranks of the St. Louisians.

* * *

THAT strike of the ball players, or rather that threatened one, recalls a scene in the old play "Siberia." It is easy to picture Davy Fultz in some dive right now claiming, "Think to the mines, boys, there'll be no strike today."

BIG BIKE RACES PUT OVER WILL BE RUN TONIGHT

The cycle races scheduled for last night at Revere Beach were postponed until this evening, when the original program will be carried out, with the exception of the special sprint match.

The severe shower made the Revere track so slippery that the management considered it would be dangerous to undertake having the races last night.

The twenty-five-mile motor event will bring together Leon Didier, the French champion, George Wiley, the American title-holder, and Clarence Carman of Jamaica, the only rider to take the foreign riders measure at the bench track this season.

The men are all in the best of condition, and while Didier is riding in top form just now, many are picking Wiley to win.

Manager Butler will put on a couple of special events to make up for the match sprint race, and with these in addition to the regular amateur and professional races the fans are sure to get a fine night of racing.

Dunn Wins Money War Over Barrow

BALTIMORE, July 22.—President Barrow of the International League it is reported today wanted to hold up the payment to Jack Dunn for the Orioles that he sold. Barrows seemed to be fearful that Dunn, having sold his players, would throw up the game and leave the International League on the rocks.

The idea, as stated here, was to hold back the men until the end of the season as a club to hold Dunn in the game.

Dunn, it is said here, became highly wrought up and informed Barrow that unless the money for the players disposed of was turned over within forty-eight hours the Baltimore team would be entirely dismantled and there would be a merry how-d'-do all around.

BASEBALL CHATTER

CHARLEY SCHMIDT, THE BRAVES FIRST baseman, established the season's record for consecutive at bat base during the recent series between the Braves and Cubbies. Schmidt went through a while game with only three putouts at first base.

* * *

SINCE SMILING DAN HOWLEY TOOK charge of the Montreal team the Royals have been playing a much better brand of ball, and interest has increased in the Canadian city. The club was a tail-ender when Howley took charge but it has won about half its games since that time.

* * *

UMPIRE LINCOLN, THE SUBSTITUTE OFficial on the National League staff, made his debut at Pittsburgh several days ago and his work drew much favorable comment from the press. Lincoln has done creditable umpiring in minor leagues for some years, in the off season he is a school teacher in New England.

* * *

CLOSE TO 50,000 PERSONS ATTENDED the recent series of four games between the Chicago and Giants at Chicago. The old Chicago pacer to remark that the public does not care a rap who owns the club as long as it is in the fight for the pennant.

* * *

LEE MAGEE WAS COMPILING A GREAT batting record when he had his recent argument with an umpire and thereby drew a suspension. He had batted safely in sixteen consecutive games and in several of these contests he got more than one hit. This is the best season Magee has had since he came into the National League.

* * *

THE REAL ANSWER FOR ALL TAIL-END teams is the following: When the batters hit, the pitchers can't pitch; when the pitchers pitch, the batters can't hit, and when the pitchers pitch and the batters hit, the fielders throw the game away.

* * *

DRESSEN, THE ST. LOUIS FIRST BASEman, who may become a regular in a jiff, which will make Jack Hume a regular utility at one of the other infield positions, is a high-class fielder.

* * *

DURING THE RECENT VISIT OF THE Cardinals to the East Dressen batted with considerable at first base, and his every work led to many questions as to his identity. Manager Huggins believes that the shift will add more strength to his club.

* * *

FANS IN CHICAGO WHO HAVE REnamed local to the Cubs are now bemoaning the fact that Tinker and Evers are no longer in their midst. They feel that with these two stars in the infield the present aggregation of Cubs would surely land the pennant.

* * *

BUNNY HEARNE, THE SOUTHPAW WHO went around the world last Winter with the Giants as trainer, is a busy man, according to reports. Manager Joe Kelly has secured Hearne for his hurler Jack Pfeil, and this is taken to mean that he is to let Hearne out.

Three New Records for Grand Circuit at Cleveland Track

CLEVELAND, O., July 22.—Three new records were hung up at the second day of the Grand Circuit harness races at North Randall track.

In the first heat of the 2:05 pace Dr. Burns, Jr., forced William, champion 3-year-old pacer of 1913, to a mark of 2:02, a record for a 3-year-old pacer, and the second in 2:02¾.

In the third heat of the Ohio stakes, Star Winter established a new mark of 2:05 for the event, and also trotted the fastest mile of the year on any track.

Leo Axworthy captured the Fasig 3-year-old trot, 2:12 class, in two straight heats. The final heat was done in 2:08 and the first in 2:08¾, the fastest heat and two heats the event was ever trotted in.

Mayo's Keeps Him Happy

All over New England you'll find Mayo's smokers going about their daily occupations with cheerfulness and enthusiasm. These men are happy because they are healthy and contented. And they are healthy and contented because they enjoy cool, fragrant, comforting pipefuls of Mayo's Cut Plug all day long, all year 'round.

Mayo's Cut Plug

Mayo's has been New England's favorite pipe-tobacco for 40 years. This ripe, mellow Burley tobacco is aged and blended to such delightful fragrance, sweetness and richness, that the longer a man smokes Mayo's the better he likes it.

Give Mayo's a week's trial—note how evenly this Cut Plug burns in your pipe—how pleasantly cool it smokes. Learn the steady satisfaction it gives you. Then you'll keep right on smoking Mayo's.

LONG LIST OF STAR TENNIS GAMES TODAY

MATCHES TODAY.

LONGWOOD C. C. SINGLES.

N. W. Niles vs. M. E. McLoughlin.

T. C. Bundy vs. Harold Holmes.

F. C. Bangs vs. A. S. Dabney.

F. B. Alexander vs. I. C. Wright.

G. P. Gardner, Jr., vs. R. N. Williams, 2d.

Robert Le Roy vs. E. H. Whitney.

R. Nickerson vs. G. W. Wightman.

W. F. Johnson vs. S. L. Bent.

By FRED HOEY.

A program of tennis that is hard to equal will be offered at the Longwood Cricket Club courts this afternoon, when play continues in the singles for the Longwood challenge bowl, and in the doubles for the Eastern doubles championship.

Foremost in the singles schedule is the match between Maurice E. McLoughlin, national champion and winner of the Longwood bowl last year and Nat Niles.

This match is held over from yesterday because of the rain. There is a tremendous amount of interest in this match. Not that Niles has much of a chance to beat the great wizard, but because it offers an opportunity for tennis fans to see how far the champion has improved his game over last year.

Niles is just the sort of player who ought to bring out all McLoughlin has in store. The match will be called at 2 o'clock.

OTHER FEATURE MATCHES.

This match will feature the afternoon singles, but there are other matches in this class that are very attractive. R. Lindsay Murray of San Francisco will meet Fred C. Inman of New York. W. F. Johnson, a member of the Davis cup team last year, is paired with S. L. Bent, Irving C. Wright and F. B. Alexander and G. P. G. Gardner 2d will play R. Norris Williams 2d.

The doubles offer some interesting matches today. The feature pair to work in the championship court at 3 o'clock are H. H. Hackett and F. B. Alexander against F. C. Inman and R. D. Little. These teams are famous for work in the doubles and should attract a big gallery.

The California pair, R. Lindsay Murray and Ellis Pottrell, both with the dazzling service, will have a chance to show their worth in the doubles when they oppose H. H. Whitman and R. Lovering.

Another clever match could result when G. P. Touchard and W. M. Washburn play H. Tallant and W. P. Johnson.

DAVIS CUP CANDIDATES PLAY.

The unofficial announcement that the Davis cup team to defend the cup would be made up of McLoughlin, Williams, Bundy and Behr caused little surprise yesterday at the courts.

These men represent the best all around class in tennis for work in singles and doubles.

With Karl Behr in the doubles the complete Davis cup team will be seen in action at Longwood this afternoon in their respective matches.

Four Games in Two Days for Sox Before They Start for the West

By NICK FLATLEY.

Two games today.

Two more tomorrow.

The Red Sox have another chance to take themselves by the heartstrings, so to say, and hitch up a bit. The Browns, of course, will be the enemy. The Carrigans have to date this season bumped the Rickeys six times in eight classes.

One of those cleanups, lack of which lately has been doing the Hope referral stunt to the hearts of the faithful, would help get back the couple of games that the Mackmen have succeeded in tacking onto their vantage by cleaning up a couple of double-headers recently.

The Athletics stand now, the pupils of Professor McGillicuddy, of Philadelphia, are six and a half games to the good of the Boston squad. The way they are going now that six-game margin looks several miles wide. But looks in baseball cut little ice.

For instance, when the Red Sox left Philadelphia a short time back after lolling four out of five, they looked like champs. Yet Chicago came to Boston and won two out of three in a row. Then the White Sox stopped Philadelphia and were promptly shattered for four in a row by the Mackmen.

The Senators took three games in five from the Red Sox. The latter a week ago turned back the Nine four times running. Yet the tail-enders left Boston for Washington and won three of the four games played.

Any man from first place to the cellar in the league is just as much knotted up as ever. The Carrigans, fourth, are but half a game back of second.

If the Red Sox win today and the Yanks split a bill at the Polo Grounds the Fenway stars have a chance to move up to first place. But if the leaders, or be virtually tied there with the Senators, they will maintain their .001 ahead on the average basis.

We tremble to say anything about a move into second place, for the position has seemed to be a hoodoo that the Red Sox cannot get over. But it is time enough, the Lord knows, but never seem to be able to quite reach. A brace sweep, though, and perhaps the scaling of the hoodoo will be accomplished.

Today will see the return to the game of George Foster, the greatest right-hand pitcher brought out this year. The young chap, who holds the season's record for consecutive scoreless innings, has entirely recovered from the effects of a wrenched knee sustained in New York on June 24.

WATCH THE BRAVES.

Hats off to the Braves—the first division Braves. In three days they have hopped from last place into the first division. Today they are coolly perched in fourth place and headed for home. They sure will get some welcome when they arrive out at Walpole street.

They'll deserve it, too. With the possible exceptions of the Giants and Athletics, no team in either big league is playing the banana ball that the Stallings stalwarts have had on tap on their present cruise through the country.

Since leaving home they have played fourteen games and have won ten of them, which is sure championship road work for any team. As they cleaned up a double-header before starting off, they have tucked away twelve out of sixteen, which is some fucking.

Here's what they did on the road:

	W.	L.
At Chicago	3	1
At St. Louis	2	2
At Cincinnati	3	1
At Pittsburgh	2	0
Totals	10	4

They are playing a double-header with the Pirates in Smoky Town this afternoon, and after another fray there tomorrow they'll come home and entertain the Westerners here for a few weeks.

If they could keep up their present great gait for about a month, they would be mighty close to the top of the heap, but even if they go along at a somewhat less shattering clip they still have a good chance to work a bit higher in the race.

Also if they do lag a little, they are likely to hit the clinches with great suddenness, as the situation in the Peace League, after the first three places are out of the way, is just as hair-raising and exciting as the battle for the place in the American ranks.

Bunched back of Boston comes Cincinnati, Philadelphia, Brooklyn and Pittsburgh, all tearing along under a two-game blanket. And the tail-end Pirates are only 12½ games across off thin the leading Giants, who, by the way, have very pretty little struggle on their hands with the Cubs, who will not be shaken.

For more than a week the O'Day outfit has stayed within a three-game stretch of the Mcgraws, while the Cards are only a couple of pastimes farther back.

10 Cure Salt Rheum and Scaly Skin

A Most Effective Treatment Quick in Results

It is simply great to use S. S. S. for the blood and get a clear, new, healthy skin, no more salt rheum, itching scales, eczema, crusts, pimples or skin affection. What a world of satisfaction! Perhaps you have greased and suffered for years with more temporary relief.

The trouble is in your blood and it appears on the surface because the skin is a natural outlet. In the blood circulating through the skin are millions of tiny organs, the tissue cells break down and destroy impurities. This is their work and is but a network of tiny blood vessels, nerves and a modified form of mucous membrane in which blood impurities are prepared for elimination.

And it is only by supplying skin tissue with new and purified blood that the constant outpouring of impurities is checked.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of a druggist. Use this splendid, purely vegetable blood cleanser and get rid of all skin troubles.

Avoid substitutes. Don't accept them. Write the Swift Specific Co., 108 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for their wonderful book on skin diseases.

"Personally Conducted" Trips to California Combine Comfort and Economy

Of course you have planned to take a California trip sometime, but possibly you have been waiting until you thought you could better afford it. If that is the case, I have some good news for you.

Special Personally Conducted Parties to California are especially planned to meet just such requirements. Every detail means extra low fare tickets and have comfortable quarters in clean and attractive Pullman Tourist sleeping cars. You have a personal escort all the way by a chosen representative of the "Burlington Route" whose first duty is to relieve you of care and detail, make you feel "at home" and point out and explain each of the thousands of points of interest along the way.

The cost of it all is surprisingly low.

If you will write, or drop in at the office and let me tell you the plan in detail, you will be surprised at the small cost. Ask for booklet "Personally Conducted" series.

BRAVES TO HOLD A PLACE AMONG THE FIRST FOUR

PITTSBURGH, July 22.—With two games safely tucked away and a double-header today and a single game tomorrow on the schedule, the Braves are banking on cleaning up the Pittsburghs to usual Braves shape and returning to Boston on Friday with a firm place in the first division.

The Braves again romped home winners in yesterday's game, showing their heels to the Buccaneers by the score of 6 to 2.

With Dick Rudolph at his very best there never was a doubt of the outcome, the only question being what the final score would be. The Braves played brilliantly in the field and hitting at the right time.

Maranville was all over the infield and nothing got past him. He outshone his distinguished rival, Hans Wagner, and the work of Captain Evers had Vlox beaten a mile.

Deal also made some stops of stickers that would have brought runs in and he faltered. His two errors did not do any damage at all.

The visitors made Marty O'Toole wish he had never been them. He wasn't exactly to blame for the first run garnered, nor the second, but in the eighth inning the Braves showed him that he had nothing in his repertoire to fool them, and he hied himself to the shower bath, glad to get away alive.

He was very wild, and when he did get the white pill over the pan, plunk went the Boston bats against it for safeties.

NEW RATING FOR VANITIE IN NEXT RACE

NEW YORK, July 22.—Alexander Smith Cochran's cup defence yacht Vanitie went out for a short trial spin off the Sound yesterday, and afterward Mr. Cochran, Captain Harry Haff, Captain Ed Willis and William Gadfrey, the designer, inspected the new steel boom, which has been made ready at City Island during the boat's absence at Newport.

The spar is now ready to be shipped, but it is doubtful if it will be used at all, owing to the effect it will have upon the ship's compass.

It is much more springy than the present one and weighs somewhat less, but the addition of so much steel is expected to put the compass out of kilter.

Steel booms were used on both Columbia and Reliance, but in the present instance it would be necessary to install an extra compass below deck in order to overcome the error in the readings on the present instrument, according to John L. Bliss, who has adjusted compasses on a number of former cup yachts.

Mr. Bliss is opposed to the steel boom for this reason, and there is little likelihood that the new spar will be tried.

When the cup yachts next race the Vanitie and Resolute will have new ratings, which will put the Gardner boat under a smaller handicap. The Resolute's increased sail area is expected to cut at least twelve seconds off her allowance, while the Vanitie's changes are counted on to make a difference of from six to ten seconds in thirty miles.

These changes will make the boats more evenly matched, and the Vanities will probably have to allow about one minute and twenty seconds to the Resolute in the next race.

Gilmore Explains Losses and Gains by Federal League

CHICAGO, July 22.—With the Federal League playing season half over, President Gilmore, of the new baseball organization, has announced that the league as a whole has lost about $50,000 thus far.

"There are five clubs in the league that have lost little. They are St. Louis, Kansas City, Brooklyn, Indianapolis and Pittsburgh. Brooklyn and St. Louis are the heaviest losers of these five.

"The attendance is increasing as the season advances. Kansas City has lost perhaps $8,000, and St. Louis $20,000.

"Indianapolis is just in the balance, and with the club doing well, the Hoosiers will pull out on the right side of the ledger."

President Gilmore further states that if the profits made by Chicago, Baltimore and Buffalo were taken into consideration the league has not lost any money, but is playing about even.

A CAMP FIRE STORY

"Say, Bunkie," said an army regular to his tentmate down under the Southern moon on the Rio Grande, "why is it that Taps is so often the signal for you to take something out of that little box?"

"Why, it reminds me it's time to take 'Taps,'" replied Bunkie. "I was told that if I kept the poisonous waste out of my system and avoided constipation by using 'Taps' I'd never report At Sick Call, and I never have. No matter how 'bilious' I feel at night I always have a good morning at 'Reveille' when I take 'Taps.'"

Not a violent purge, but a highly efficient laxative which gently assists Nature, acting beneficially on the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood, the demand for "Taps" increases amazingly everywhere immediately they are known.

Edith Forgets Her Blues in Sleep and Things Look Brighter in the Morning.

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER.

CHAPTER VI.

"COLORS seen by candle light
differ with the morning,"

runs the line of an old poem. Certainly to persons of impressionable or mercurial temperament affairs that seemed gloomy at night, when one was weary, assume a different aspect on a bright morning after a good night's sleep.

So to Edith Hale—awakening from a night of slumber unburdened by thoughts of Tom's failure to keep his appointment with her—life was not the same kind of problem that it had been last evening. It has been asserted that we are more sane in the morning than at night. Certainly Edith Hale was her better, normal self on this Spring morning.

She dressed rapidly, with an appreciation of the beauty of the sunlight, of the budding trees, of life in general. She flung wide her windows when her toilet was completed, and, leaning out, drew in great breaths of the fresh air. The trees in the orchard beyond her window had put out little buds that were swelling almost into bloom; there was a soft green haze over the distant hills; it was Spring; she was young; Tom loved her, and—yes; she was sure this morning that she loved him!

A knock at her door made her turn and call "Come in!" She smiled gladly as Constance entered, ready for breakfast.

"Good morning!" Edith greeted her cheerfully. "Isn't this a lovely day—and, Connie, wasn't I a little goose to be as blue as I was last night? Today everything seems different."

"Of course it does!" Constance agreed cordially. "I knew you were only tired and disappointed last night."

"Such a wise girl as you are!" Edith exclaimed, kissing her rapturously. "I suppose I'll have to feel hurt at Tom's absence. But I did just the same—I don't now."

"Then forget it, you poor dear," Constance advised. "We are all moody sometimes and cannot really help it. Now let's go down to breakfast. Aunt will be wondering where we are."

A LETTER FROM TOM

An envelope lay at Edith's place at the table and she tore it open eagerly, for it was addressed in Tom's handwriting. It was the note he had written hastily yesterday afternoon after his telephone message to her.

"This letter may seem unnecessary to you, darling," he wrote, "but I cannot go away without sending you just a line to tell you once more how sadly disappointed I am not to be with you this evening. I am trying to console myself with the thought that tomorrow night, come what may, we will be together at the dinner at which we are to be our friends know that I am the most fortunate man in the world. When I think of what it all means, Edith, I can hardly believe that to such an unworthy person as myself this wonderful gift has come.

"I know you love me enough to be disappointed by my not being with you this evening, but by the time this reaches you this evening without me will be over and you will remember that nothing short of a catastrophe can keep me away tomorrow night. I believe the dinner is to be at 7:30. I shall try to get out to Homewood and to you by 7 o'clock."

Edith Hale read and re-read the letter, her color deepening and her heart full of affection for this man who loved her so much. How could she have thought such horrid things about him last night? Even if he was not as handsome and as enthusiastic as Ralph, he was so good and so faithful and trustful that any girl might be proud to win his love.

"You look mighty bright and happy this morning, honey," her mother observed affectionately.

"I am happy," the girl rejoined with a smile. "Why shouldn't I be? The day is perfect, we are all together and well, and"—

She paused, blushing, and her father laughingly supplied the rest of her sentence—"And Tom's coming this evening!"

"Yes," she affirmed, "that is one reason why I am so happy."

Then the talk turned to the prospective dinner party, at which there were to be eight couples.

"Tom will take you into dinner, won't he, mother?" asked Edith. "I think it would look well to have him do so, don't you?"

"Can you spare him to me for so long a time as that?" laughed her mother. "I shall feel like a wretch, depriving you of him."

But Edith insisted that, under the circumstances, she would prefer this arrangement.

"The news of our engagement will not be announced until the close of dinner, you know," she said, "and it will be easier for me if I have an unpartial stranger to talk to until then."

"What about Ralph?" her father queried. "He will want to sit by you, of course."

GAD AT REFUSAL

He looked at his daughter as he made this query. He had known for some time that Ralph was in love with Edith, and wondered if she knew it too. He was glad when she shook her head decidedly.

"No!" she exclaimed. "I don't want Ralph with me. Let him take Connie on to dinner. Would you like to have Ralph by you, dear?"—turning across at Constance.

"I don't care who is my companion at dinner," Constance replied unconcernedly, "so long as the affair goes off all right. The conversation will be general most of the time, anyway—and Ralph Morton is jolly and good fun to talk to. So arrange the table to suit yourself, Edith, dear. It's your party, remember, and I do think that upon this occasion you might have matters just as you want them. Of course, put Ralph by me. If he doesn't mind, I don't!"

She did not add what was in her mind, namely, that she did not care who sat by her so long as Ralph did not sit by Edith.

"Somehow," she said to herself later as she arranged the flowers in the various rooms in preparation for the evening's festivities, "I do not feel at all confident of Ralph Morton's honorable intentions nowadays. I hope that I am mistaken in my judgment of him. If so, I shall be only too happy to acknowledge that I have done him an injustice!"

His Maiden Speech

Lancelot was the only child of Sir William, who was the squire of the village. That is why there was a crowd to hear the budding statesman make his maiden speech; it was as much as any one's job was worth to stop away.

Lancelot's parents expected that one day he would grace the House of Commons with his presence, so did Lancelot. Nobody else thought much of his chances.

On the night of the meeting Lancelot's maternal parent swelled with pride as she sat in the middle front row and saw her dear boy walk on.

But the dear boy didn't look happy. He only looked unpleasantly hot as he mopped his chinless face with a purple handkerchief.

He rose, and a round of listless applause greeted him.

"Er—hum!"

Full stop, and more mopping.

"So on, Lance, darling!" came from the front row.

"Er—hum. Er—ladies and—er—gentlemen. I—er—" Another full stop. "Truth is—er—last night only as and I knew what I was—er—going to say. No—er—I—say—now—"

Pause.

"That's right, Lance!" encouraged his doting mother.

"Now—er—only Pa knows"

And he sat down, still mopping.

THE GIRL OF TWENTY-FIVE.

Alas! it is the bitter day I hoped would pass me by,
But wretched years have sneaked away and swept me high and dry
Upon the strand no girl would reach while girlhood is alive—
Whoever heard of any "peach" of years full twenty-five?

About me sport the debutantes, or girlies of sixteen;
I see the men now turn to them who lately called me "queen."
I am not old or without pet, my powers strongly thrive—
But fast from the shelf I'm set since I am twenty-five.

I'll hie me to Manhattan town where none shall know my age;
There is no wrinkle on my brow—I don't look old and sage.
I still may pass as young; I ween; my youth must still survive—
And they shall take me for eighteen, instead of twenty-five.

The city ways are strange, 'tis sure,
The girl who is a success
Must have the poise of charm mature
to bring her bids to dinner;
The men may flirt and be polite with me,
but think me young in wive—
Perhaps they'll take me seriously—
when I am THIRTY-FIVE!

DOES IT PROVE—

You are a gentleman if you fly into a rage if some one says you are not?

That advice is cheap if you act on it and it turns out to be expensive?

Love is blind, because he seldom shoots straight?

A man is a philanthropist if he looks for the "good things" he can do?

A man is modest when he feels insignificant at a suffragette lecture or a fashion show—or a modern comic opera?

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA & Ma & me went to dinner at a hotel last nite with a man named Harold Smythe-Sweeney. he was half English & half Irish, I'm told. I suppose that is why he has such a fancy name. He has been all over the world. Him & Pa used to go to skool together, & he is a rich man now but I dident like him. He was well lookin & was all the time talking about himself & how he has been in the world to grate welth.

If there is any one thing with I pride myself on he sed wen we was all at the table, it is how to order a dinner. I am sure you folks have already noticed the quiet elegans of this restorant.

It is very hutiful, sed Ma.

My own idee, all my own idee, sed Mister Smythe-Sweeney. & I am sure you will find these clam cocktails exquizit. Isn't it a dreem? he asked Pa.

Well, Harold, sed Pa, I will tell you frankly that a clam cocktail is a little out of my beeten track. I leen more toward other forms of the milk. I'm sed, but I am game for anything. So I'm finished his cocktail.

Everything with the waiter first us tasted pritty good but I was kind of hungry & thare wasent enuff & I dident want to ask for moar because the waiter had a face like a prize fiter & never nofised me.

I am sure you will like this duck sed Pa's frend. I was always partial to grouse, he sed, & this duck is prepared as we used to have it in our English hoam. The Smythes were always grate hands for duck, he sed, & I call it a ripping dish. I suppoas that is the Smyths in me, he toald Ma.

Dosent the Sweeney in you ever cry out for a good hunk of corn beef & cabbag & plenty of spuds? sed Pa.

I abhor the dish, sed Mister Smythe-Sweeney. It is so gross, so material. Try sum of this 1883 Blew de Rewdes, he sed. Note the bokay of it & how it sparkles. Kings have quaffed meaner wine, he sed.

I was never much of a hand for wine, sed Pa, & if I was ever anywhare neer a ale-mill I always had a mug of ale with my dinner instead of wine. But as I sed beefoar, I am game for anything, & I never started anything that I cuddent go thru with. Bobbie, sed Pa, whatever you do, dont go to this Blew de Rewdy, it is not for children to drink.

Ma gaiv me a taste of hers but I dident like it. The little thing is no connosure, I see, sed Mister Smythe-Sweeney.

No, sed Pa, I doant suppoas he is, but yew wud hardly expes him to be a connosure wen he hasent been but a short time in the league. I dident know what a connosure was, but if Pa's frend is one I doant want to be one.

All thru the dinner Mister Smythe-Sweeney kep bragging about how swell everything was and we all had to say yes, but I like our littel dinners at hoam a whole log better & so does Pa & Ma.

That is sum frend you have, sed Ma to Pa on the way hoam.

Doant blame me, sed Pa, wen he was a kid without any money he was all right, almost altogether. Let us hoap so, sed Ma.

Wasn't Quite Sure

A Scotchman, in search of work, succeeded, after much difficulty, in finding employment at a shipyard in Liverpool.

The job, which consisted mainly in carrying heavy planks, was by no means to the man's liking. After he had been at it for some time, therefore, he went to the foreman and asked:

"Did Ah tell ye ma name when Ah started to work?"

"Yes," replied the foreman. "You said it was Simpson."

"Oh, then, that's a right!" said the Scot, slinging toward the pile of planks which he had yet to carry. "I was jist a-wunnerin if ye thocht Ah said it was Samson!"

Ada Patterson Writes on

"Twilight Sleep" and Motherhood

Women Cheered by the Dawn of a New Hope Which May Lead to the Lifting of the Curse of Eden

By ADA PATTERSON

IS there hope that the Edenic curse will be lifted from woman? Is it possible that the sentence passed upon her according to the Old Book that many obey and all revere has been served, and that after centuries of suffering she is to be free? Has motherhood, retaining all its tender beauty and shining glory, paid its full penalty of pain? May the greatest function of womanhood, the gift of motherhood, be accepted without fear?

Is the new "Twilight Sleep" treatment a step toward the great goal?

It is a question for doctors to answer, and as has been true since the first two doctors differed about the efficacy of the first herb they ate plans apart in their views. They are hurling expletives at each other across an alley safety line. Physicians who speak the medical and several other strange languages are calling each other names about it.

The majority is shouting "It can't be done." The minority is answering "But it has been done, and whatever has been done may be done again." When persons lose their ground or their temper they begin to call names. The majority of the doctors have adopted this last resort. The minority hold their ground, as Galileo held his, though he held it on bended knee and with lowered eyes. "Crazy," "visionary," "foolish enthusiasts" cry the majority.

Only a little group of German physicians is continuing an experiment with the persistence of Robert Bruce's spider. Again and again, over and over, the effort has been made to rob maternity of its terrors, the fear of pain, the fear of death, the fear of fear itself. The group of physicians and an experienced nurse in a small hospital at Baden say they have succeeded, that they have succeeded, not occasionally, but usually, not twice or fifteen times, but five thousand times.

Five thousand times they have met the enemy that stalks about the bed of a mother, the grim enemy that stretches out gaunt, heedless arms for mother and child, torturing one and sometimes both, and have conquered him. But the Thomases of the medical world are setting up a loud chorus to cry them down.

THROUGH THE DARK WAY

They assert that they can induce a half-conscious state that causes the mother to forget her pain, but enables her to use her will and muscular power.

"It was very hard to do, but we have done it," they say. "It took a long time and great patience, but we have won."

A preliminary injection of opium, and subsequent injections of scopolamin, will take a mother through the dark way of maternity without pain and with no agonizing and dangerous nervous reaction. The way of the cross for women has become a highway of joy and triumph, so say the half-dozen nurses and doctors and the devoted nurse at Freiburg.

Enough morphine is injected into the body, arm or any other portion of the body the physician may deem best to cause the patient to become drowsy. Thereafter, every hour or two hours, as needed, there are injections of scopolamin. Physicians and nurses are constantly present to watch and test the succeeding stages of the patient. The test of when the patient is ready for her ordeal is a test of the memory.

Is she nearly enough asleep to forget pain the instant it has passed? A physician holds up two fingers.

"How many fingers do you see?" he asks. If she answers "Two" her senses are too acute. She has not passed into the twilight state of semi-sleep. More frequent injections of the scopolamin follow.

He holds up two fingers again. How many fingers do you see?" he asks.

"One," she replies, in a distant, drowsy voice. But her eyes are open. She is able to move about. Her will is strong and active. The delicate balance between loss of memory and control of will and muscular power has been reached. The moment has arrived. That is the secret, a simple one and simply told by the physicians of Baden.

But over the objectors, and their name is legion, and in some instances distinguished, they don't say that the scopolamin, which is an extract of a weed called snake root, sometimes drives a woman crazy. No, she doesn't resent us, but her lovings interfere with her endeavors at work and endanger the child's life.

That there has been delirium in other cases where the disturbing specter of scopolamin has never stalked the room do not emphasize.

"It has been tried in this country and given up," one physician after another will impatiently tell you. "Women tried it on our city hospitals and we gave it up because the risk to the mother was thought too great," established a New York authority.

Said one who had watched the same attempts: "There was no danger to the mother, but we lost some children."

"I will not criticise what I have not seen." This was the most liberal voice in the chorus. "But I have known cases of motherhood without suffering, a very few. They were caused by equal parts of sedatives and of auto-suggestion."

ONE WHO WITNESSED

A physician who has visited the Freiburg hospital and for days and watched the work of the nurse and physician, who has studied the method, says: "But scopolamin is a poison. We induce twilight sleep by the ether cone and by chloroform. That is a dangerous method. When you see the patient has had enough, you remove the ether cone and inject a powerful drug into the body and you can do no more. The poison is king for a while, and it may be for only a while. Besides, the German doctors say themselves that the drug-controlled, twilight sleep, must be given in a hospital with two doctors and two nurses to watch each case. That puts the matter beyond the reach of a poor woman. It would bankrupt any but a rich man. It is a delusion and a snare to call it a 'birth cure.'

"There will never be motherhood without pain," says one physician.

"There will be no painless maternity until women return to the simple conditions of the Indian," vows another.

"I have known a few instances of the great sacrifice without corresponding suffering," said another. "The greatest number of these I have known them, but I have not known why they were. I hope that some day I may find out why. But I would not mean any one to do it and I don't know how it can be done."

Doctors are heroes and cowards. Heroes in the fight for the cure of fear, cowards shivering at the name of that medical spectre, "Professional secrecy." Pledged to help and save humanity, they fear to announce a beneficent discovery for fear of being hurt but the medical society gibbet would hurt them more than it would them. Doctors are as cruel to their fellow practitioners as women are when the world was darkened by belief in witchcraft.

There are progressives and obstructionists. They have organized a science and a method to end the fear of surgery a great deal. But they have put brakes on the progress of the first and definite step toward painless motherhood. They said cancer could never be cured and insanity could never be controlled. But some forms can be cured and some stages of both, fainting spells, dizziness, backaches, headache, and bearing-down pains—are all symptoms of a feminine organism in an unhealthy condition.

How to Keep Face Young and Attractive

The way to ward off old age is not to fear it, not to allow one's self to be depressed by the dread of approaching years. The only legitimate preventives and avoid trying experiments with cosmetics and other fads. Of course, a good cold cream is very effective way to keep the complexion soft and velvety, but the best cold cream is one that is made at home, for it is enough to completely rejuvenate a worn-out complexion.

Glycerine and other articles, the first signs of advancing age, may be removed by a simple, harmless preparation made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel. It is used as a face bath.

Household Hints

If screws, gaslitings, the sides of bedsteads or anything else of this kind become tightly fixed and cannot be moved, the following method will generally be found to succeed them. Pour a little oil on the tight parts and then hold a lighted candle underneath until it is warm. You will then find that it is easy to separate or unscrew the fixed parts.

When washing and rinsing colored materials add a teaspoonful of Epsom salts to each gallon of water and even the most delicate shades will neither fade nor run. Serge or merino of any description which has been used a little may also be washed in this way without any risk of the dye running.

If an iron is allowed to get red-hot, it will never retain the heat as well again. The flatiron is badly abused if allowed to stand on the stove and put in a dusty place. Irons should be put away to cool as soon as done with, and then kept in a cool place away from dust till wanted again.

To cure the soreness which comes at the sides of the nose where the glasses rest, bathe with methylated spirits and dab on the affected parts when dry. The soreness will soon clear over with a little boracic powder or starch. This will harden the skin and keep it from coming off.

To clean brass flower pots or trays rub them with a piece of lemon; then pour boiling water over them, and finally polish with a soft dry cloth.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Good Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and lack of energy when, by having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, creams, reigh themselves of their unhappy skinniness and think nothing can make them fat. But this belief is not hopeless. A recently discovered combination is helping many fat grow after years of thinness, and it is also relieving many suffering the waste of sickness or faulty digestion by strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements are acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless compound, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A well known physician of Sargol should produce flesh and strength in every case where insufficient digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. Leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand for it.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve tonic and vitalizer, it should not be used by nervous people when they want to put on pounds of flesh.—ADVERTISEMENT.

TAKE FIRST STEP TO INDICT NEW HAVEN LOOTERS

Initial steps were taken today by Attorney-General McReynolds to file a bill in equity against the New Haven Railroad and to lay before a Federal Grand Jury the criminal aspects of the monopoly maintained by the company in New England, according to dispatches from Washington.

This newest and most drastic move against New Haven looters is made by personal direction of President Wilson.

The expectation today is that the bill in equity will be filed in the United States District Court in New York within the next three days.

It is reported no time will be lost in presenting to the Federal jurors the evidence collected by the agents and attorneys of the Department of Justice.

TO PROSECUTE MELLEN.

How many indictments will be sought was not known today, but it was plainly indicated in correspondence made public that the Attorney-General expects to ask for a bill against Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven.

Attorney-General McReynolds will immediately order United States District Attorney Marshall at New York to summons a Grand Jury.

The work of laying evidence before this body on which to ask for criminal warrants against officers and directors of the J. P. Morgan-C. S. Mellen regime will be begun as soon as possible.

President Wilson in his letter gives evidence of strong feeling against the New Haven directors for their rejection of the agreement for the separation of the Boston & Maine because of the so-called "farring" of the enabling act passed by the Massachusetts Legislature.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

President Wilson's letter to Attorney-General McReynolds follows:

The White House.
Washington, July 21, 1914.

My Dear Attorney-General:

I have your letter of today, enclosing a copy of your letter of July 9th to Mr. J. H. Hustis, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, which together discloses the failure of the directors of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company to comply with the terms of the settlement proposed by them and accepted by us in the matter of their railroad holdings. This final decision in this matter causes me the deepest surprise and regret. Their failure, upon so slight a pretext, to carry out an agreement deliberately and solemnly entered into and which was manifestly in the common interest, is to me inexplicable and entirely without justification.

You have been kind enough to keep me fully informed of every step the department took in the matter and the action of the department has throughout met with my entire approval. It was just, reasonable and efficient. It should have resulted in avoiding what must now be done.

In the circumstances, the course you propose to be the only one the government can pursue. I therefore request and direct that a proceeding in equity be begun seeking the dissolution of the unlawful monopoly of transportation facilities in New England now sought to be maintained by the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company, and that the criminal aspects of the case be laid before a grand jury.

With high regard,

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) WOODROW WILSON.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were irregular this afternoon, but most leading issues showed losses. Traders were waiting for the Eastern rate case decision. The New York gains included Mexican Petroleum 1¾, Baltimore & Ohio ¾, American Smelting ¾ and Steel ¼. Among recessions were Chesapeake & Ohio ¼, Missouri, Kansas & Texas preferred 1¼, Canadian Pacific ¼, Missouri Pacific ¼, Reading ¼, Lehigh Valley ¼, Northern Pacific ¼ and New York Central ¼. Unchanged issues included Southern Pacific, American Telephone, Atlantic Coast Line, Amalgamated and Union Pacific.

In Boston New Haven was off a point and Boston & Maine about a point. United Fruit was unchanged. American Telephone up ¼, Greene-Cananea, Shattuck-Arizona and Granby ⅜. Shoe commons were irregular. Trading was light in the afternoon session after noon.

NEW HAVEN WATCHED.

Interest was centred in New Haven when the New York market opened because of the statement by President Wilson to have the Department of Justice institute civil and criminal proceedings against the road and directors prosecuted in a criminal court. New Haven sold off two points at the start, but quickly recovered more than a point and did not add to the opening figure again during the morning.

The list ranged lower at the opening, but from recoveries in all but a few minutes gains were the rule. But the market was not as active as it was yesterday, sales for the first hour totalling around 52,000. Price changes were small.

AMERICANS LOWER IN LONDON.

The sagging of Americans continued in London, where traders did not like the President's action in the Attorney-General McReynolds' order concerning the New Haven. It was reported that securities there were fearful that market regarding home affairs, but that speculation was very quiet. W. R. Lawson cabled from London to Hearst newspapers: "When we size up all the big developments and financial risks ahead, we may wonder that prices hold up as well as they do."

A Washington dispatch says it is expected that criminal proceedings against New Haven directors will be instituted by the New York district Grand Jury within the next week or ten days.

ROCK ISLANDS WEAK.

Rock Island issues weakened further upon the announcement that the tentative plan to raise $30,000,000, to be expended within three years, for the rehabilitation of the Rock Island road has been abandoned because the syndicate headed by William A. Read & Co. is unwilling to finance the reorganization because the unsatisfactory showing of a revised balance sheet and an estimate of earnings of the property. The action is based upon the new rules for accounting ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is said Mr. Read held that the commission's ruling regarding "depreciation for equipment" would reduce earnings.

Rock Island 4s sold at a new low record price. The 5 per cent bonds of the old Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway sold down to 49.

LIST BECAME IRREGULAR.

Lists became irregular in the forenoon and there was little improvement during the noon hour. Chesapeake & Ohio, the strongest of the weakest rails and Chicago & Northwestern among the strongest among the weak, both sold off from previously made a good gain and Missouri Pacific fell to the year's record low price. It had partially recovered by midday. Steel was steady all the morning, reflecting the broad outlook in its industry. Coppers were dull. It was reported that electrolytic was selling lower in London, where copper warrants eased off. It is said that small dealers at that point are offered metal at 13.35 cents a pound. There was a better tone to copper mining issues in Boston where Greene-Cananea advanced more than a point and Granby made a small gain. It is said that there is now little domestic or foreign demand for metal.

The understanding that developments in Mexico are pointing towards peace and Standard Petroleum up more than 2 points.

Nothing has been said on behalf of the New Haven directorate in regard to the confidential court proceedings by the Department of Justice, and it was intimated at the offices of the road in New York that conferences are being held to offset those steps. Officials declared that their only statement will be issued late this afternoon or this evening.

FINANCIAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

While the United States sold less munitions abroad, goods abroad during the last fiscal year it increased its exports of raw materials, mostly cotton and foodstuffs.

The net operating revenue of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for June increased $778,500, and for the year for twelve months was $3,000,000.

It is proposed in a bill introduced in Congress to limit postal savings funds upon farm lands. The loans may range in amount from $200 to $10,000 and run from one to twenty years at 4½ per cent interest per annum.

Rail orders during the third week of this month, it is said, call for 75,000 tons, while 2,000 cars and forty locomotives were ordered.

ADVICE ABOUT HOW TO REMOVE UNSIGHTLY HAIR

Many physicians use the ingredients contained in Rid-Em-All Hair Remover in their treatment for superfluous hair. This strong concentrate has actually helped to relieve thousands of cases of hirsutism. Therefore, why not you? Rid-Em-All is absolutely harmless to the skin, too, and does away with unpleasantness and embarrassment. It is to be had at most well-stocked druggists in 50c and $1.00 sizes. They apply a few times as directed. Rid-Em-All Hair Remover is a delightful cream, leaving the skin positively smoother and whiter than before. It removes the hair without the slightest irritation. Guaranteed.

If Rid-Em-All is now a standard toilet article used by thousands of women, you need have no more hesitation in asking for and using it than in asking for and using a toilet powder. Try it! Rid-Em-All is not sent over the counter, so you must ask for it yourself—that is why some may think if you are not familiar with it. But ask for it and you will find it in stock at all leading druggists. Rid-Em-All is manufactured by the Pilgrim Mfg. Co., New York, valuable information sent on request.

Ex-Governor Guild Is Guilty of a Blunder in Appealing to Mr. Morgan

A Government OF the People, FOR the People and BY the People Need Rely Only Upon Itself for the Protection and the Salvation of Its Citizens and Their Enterprises

Ex-Governor Guild has made a curious and direct plea to J. P. Morgan the younger to give his assistance to the people of New England in their present railroad difficulty.

Governor Guild is guilty here of an unwitting blunder. This attitude which he takes is typical of the mistake which the public have made during the last generation in their attitude toward men who have achieved notoriety and success in certain kinds of money making.

During the terrible coal strike, when the poor of the country were almost freezing to death, distinguished men humiliated themselves and their government by appealing to young Morgan's father to save the country. There can be nothing so degrading and humiliating to the dignity of our country and to the power of its people as this kind of balderdash.

The coal strike was not settled by any appeal to Mr. Morgan. It was settled when Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States, made up his mind that the government would stand it no longer and notified the coal barons and the railroad trust that he would employ the power of the government if they did not come to terms immediately. Mr. Roosevelt has always been a man of force. These eminent financiers believed that he meant business and they came to terms immediately.

The people of this country are in a terrible plight when they have to make personal appeals to an individual to help them in a situation which was largely created by the very business organization of which that individual is the head.

We do not need Mr. Morgan's assistance in our railroad situation. Mr. Morgan could do nothing for us that we could not do ourselves. Mr. Morgan is a very ordinary person, and the only power that he has is with other people's money. If, with the best grace in the world, he should undertake to help us in our present situation, all he could do would be to lend us our own money. He would take money from our Massachusetts savings banks and trust companies and insurance companies and those other institutions over which he has control, through the power of the money trust of which he is a part, and he would advertise to New England investors that he had the stock and bonds of New England railroads for sale, and New England investors would buy them from him. He would thus lend our enterprises our own money, and if he could not do this he could not help us at all.

It is high time that we got over the idea that we must rely upon these notorious financiers for our protection and salvation. Their power and their influence has existed in this very attitude which we have taken towards them. It has also enabled them to rob us without limit and with impunity, as they have robbed us in the New Haven and the Boston & Maine and in almost every public enterprise with which the Morgan house has been concerned.

Mr. Morgan is not different from any of the rest. They are all alike. It would be far better if Ex-Governor Guild should ask Mr. Morgan to sell every dollar's worth of securities which he has in New England railroads and cancel every contract his firm may have with them directly or indirectly, and thus remove himself from all potential interest in our New England affairs.

This would be a long step toward restoration of public confidence, which must precede a healthy revival of our New England railroads.

A government OF the people, FOR the people and BY the people need rely only upon itself for the protection and the salvation of its citizens and of their enterprises. The power of our national government represents the collective power of all our citizens. The power of this Commonwealth represents all the power of all its citizens taken together. Whatever Morgan or any of his confederates can do, the government of the United States can do a thousand times over. So can Massachusetts.

The most effective part of the successful money-making legerdemain of the men of the Morgan and the Rockefeller type is the cultivation of the foolish notion that public enterprises must have their financial help in order to succeed.

It is under this false idea that they make us pay their price for their services, which is taken out in big underwriting profits and the privilege of mismanaging the property and fleecing investors as they have done in the New Haven and Boston & Maine railroads, in the San Francisco Railroad, in the Rock Island Railroad, in the Chicago & Alton and in almost every enterprise they have laid their hands upon where the privilege of covering in by extorting from the public is not unlimited.

The consummate act of self-helpfulness and self-reliance will be the public ownership of these great public utilities.

Why "Curses" May Really Bring Evil

Psychological science explains why a long series of tragedies has actually followed a mother's curse upon Austria's Emperor; why misfortune grew from the killing of Alexander Hamilton by Aaron Burr, and why similar troubles have been caused in other historic cases. It is all told in an amazing two-page article in next Sunday's Boston AMERICAN.

And here are some other great exclusive features in the same issue:

Look Before You Leap

A Few Suggestions on Drawing a Practical Diagram for Looking a Man or a Woman Over on the Safe Side of the Altar

By DOROTHY DIX

In a recent article upon the perils of matrimony I wrote these lines:

"The only way to be happy, though married, is to look before you leap, instead of crying, when it's too late, over the bump you got."

A man writes, apropos of that opinion, that he will give a large, handsome chromo to anybody who can furnish any practical diagram for looking a man or a woman over on the safe side of the altar so as to avoid bumping the matrimonial bumps.

That's easy. Of course nobody is wise enough to be able to tell absolutely what sort of a husband or wife a man or woman will make, because matrimony is the acid test of character, and until it is applied to an individual we never know for certain what is pinchbeck and what is pure gold.

Matrimony doesn't change the character of men and women. It merely brings out what is strongest in them. It turns good men and women into angels, and it converts bad men and women into devils, and this being the case it doesn't take any Sherlock Holmes to give a pretty good guess at the kind of a husband or wife any particular maid or bachelor will make. You have to observe his or her most predominant traits and multiply them by the common happenings of life.

Take, for instance, the youth who is a lounger and a barroom loafer, who hangs about poolrooms and saloons and who has never done an honest day's work in his life, and who sponges on his old parents for a living. Can any girl give him the once over without perceiving that he will make the sort of a husband who will always be too tired to work, and whose wife will have to take in boarders to support him?

Take the drunkard. Does it require a prophetic soul in a woman to surmise that the man who has found surcease of sorrow for his worries in drink before marriage is going to drown his troubles in liquor after marriage, when the day comes when the baby has the colic, and the rent is overdue, and the wife is sick and peevish, and when instead of matrimony being a glad, sweet song, it is one grand howl?

Take the man who is stingy. A girl with eyes in her head ought to be able to see whether a man has a Yale lock on his pocketbook just as well before she is married to him as afterward. The man who is always haggling over pennies, who invariably buys the cheapest seats in the theatre and takes a girl to the least expensive restaurant and whose whole talk is of money, gives her ample warning that he is going to make a tightwad husband.

The man who has a high temper, and who is always getting miffed about something, and who goes into jealous rages every time a girl is civil to any other man couldn't proclaim any louder, if he shouted it through a megaphone, that he would make an unjust, cruel and suspicious husband that would make his wife wish she were dead every day she lived with him.

And the man who looks upon women with contempt, who sneers at them, and who believes that a woman should be nothing but a household slave. Can any woman be fool enough to marry a man like that and not know that she will get a husband who will be a grinding tyrant to her?

And the tests to apply to women are equally obvious. Take the little silly, fluffy-haired girl who babbles like an infant. Can any man listen to her for five minutes and not know that he who marries her will get a fool for a wife, and one who will bore him stiff when her girlish beauty has vanished?

Take the girl who is the daughter of a poor man, yet who is always dressed like a fashion plate. Does it take any wonderful power of deduction for a man to reason it out that the girl whose whole soul is set on dress, and who is selfish enough to sacrifice her old father to gratify her love of finery, will offer up her husband on the same altar?

Take the girl who is noted for her cutting and sarcastic speeches. Does it take a Solomon to put a man wise that her husband will be the victim of her tongue-lashing?

Take a girl who is filled with ambition and mad for a career, and who has already fought her way to her first success. Has her husband any right to complain if she is not satisfied to settle down into domesticity?

Take a girl who is intelligent, and sweet-tempered. Doesn't it follow logically and inevitably that she will meet the trials and tribulations of married life with good sense and good temper?

Of course miracles do happen. Occasionally a bad man reforms and a good woman goes wrong. A neurotic gets well and a healthy person becomes an invalid.

But these things do not happen often. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred what a man and woman were before marriage they are after marriage, only more so.

It is possible, even now, to look before you leap, and tell whether marriage will land you in Heaven or the other place.

AFTER THE WEDDING

When Jennie came home after being out with her two women acquaintances and found Tom waiting up for her, she just told him she had been to the theatre when he asked her what kept her so late. But this did not satisfy Tom. As she left the room, Tom followed her, demanding an explanation.

"Why should I explain anything to you after you had slammed out of the house earlier in the evening, leaving me all alone?"

Tom acted as if he had not even heard her and asked her again with whom she had been out. Jennie finally told him she had accompanied the two women with whom Tom had asked her not to associate. But she didn't say anything about meeting the strange man.

"Jennie, I've asked you before not to go with those two women, and now I insist upon it. They are not the kind of women that I want my wife to associate with. I know they go around with other men and drink, and when married women do that, all is not as it should be. Can't you see the folly of it all, Jennie? Sooner or later those things are found out and usually mean misery to all concerned, especially the woman, for if a woman loses her good name she has lost about everything in the world worth while."

"Well, what do you think I'm going to do—sit home all the time and never go anywhere?" asked Jennie.

"You know how little money I have," answered Tom. "You knew it when we were married. You also know that everything I can do to make you happy I try to do, and you have got to do your share in regard to our home or this little partnership of ours will bust up. And that won't be much fun for either of us. I think you'll realize it if you'll try and think it over a little bit."

With this, Tom walked out of the room, leaving Jennie crying as she stamped her foot and said, "I won't!—H. C.

"If a Woman Loses Her Good Name"—

Science Problems

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—"Is it possible that a man's face can be drawn out of its natural growth by sleeping with the face exposed to the moon, termed as being 'moon-struck'?"—S. Christofferson.

A. This sounds like a vagary of astrology or some ancient superstition. Luna is the Latin name of the moon. Lunacy, a false name for insanity, is derived from the word luna, hence we have the long time exploited word lunatic when the true word to be applied to mind diseases is insanity.

Scientific mentalists long ago dropped the word lunacy and substituted insanity. It is injurious to sleep with the moon shining on one's face, and far worse to sleep with the sun in the face. The reason is: Enough light-wave-energy, and also ultra-light-energy penetrates the closed eyelids to excite the retina, the optic nerves, the brain, and beyond this, the inconceivably mysterious entity, the totally unknown personality.

Energy-irritation prevents absolute sleep. Parts of the personality remain awake, and these are harassed by sensations of distress. And they do say that this uneasiness finds expression in divers contortions of the muscles of the face. The partial sleeper makes wry faces.

Stars and Stripes

Eight-year-old heiress to $2,000,000 who can't get it until she's twenty-one probably thinks she's a "poor little rich girl."

Cincinnati Congressman wants to tax United States heiresses who marry titles 25 per cent. European tax is about three times as great.

Now, as a bride, "Miss Phoebe Snow" on matrimony's road will go. Here's hoping she, all dressed in white, will find it smooth as "anthracite."

Questions Answered

THE THIRD TERM

READER—You are mistaken. Mr. Roosevelt was not elected for a third term. As Vice-President he served out McKinley's unexpired term and was afterward elected by the votes of the people to his second (not third) term. No man has ever been elected to the Presidency for three successive terms, but the Constitution says nothing against the third term.

VACCINATION AND SMALLPOX

R. F. F.—You are quite right in thinking that there is "considerable opposition" to the custom of vaccination for the prevention of smallpox. Anti-vaccination societies are to be found all over the world. Probably, there is something to be said on both sides; but the fact appears to be that since the application of Jenner's discovery deaths from smallpox have been largely eliminated.

THE IRONSIDES

J. G. M.—Cromwell's soldiers, known as the "Ironsides," were the moral elite of the nation—not "rounders and tapsters," as you seem to think they were. They were riotists of the first water, but were more strict toward themselves than toward others. They never drank, never swore, never indulged for a moment in sensuality or idleness, and were never once defeated in battle.
